Something Borrowed Something Blue 2:

Something Borrowed, Something Blue? Part Two David Finegold, Laurel McFarland, William Richardson, 1993-01-01 A distinct pattern emerged in the British education and training reform process in the latter half of the 1980s. A government minister or a team of policy experts paid a brief study visit to the United States a short time later a new initiative was announced which bore a close resemblance to a US programme. More recently the flow of policy ideas across the Atlantic appears to have reversed direction. This book develops a three tiered approach to the analysis of policy borrowing. The first section draws on a number of different literatures relevant to this area to create an analytical framework for the study of policy borrowing. Section Two examines the specific context in which these borrowing episodes occurred asking Why did Britain look to America for policy inspiration in the latter half of the 1980s? The final section examines individual cases of policy borrowing at the local and national levels attempting to distill lessons about the borrowing process.

Considering the ever increasing importance of indirect taxation as a source of revenue for governments the intensifying complexity of the legal framework and the proliferating number of countries adopting indirect taxation it is essential to scrutinize how the law is applied in practice. The primary driving force in this area is undoubtedly the Court of Justice of the European Union. This book analyses selected topics e.g. fighting VAT fraud, obligations imposed on digital platforms, taxable person, taxable transactions, place of supply, taxable base and rates, exemptions and deductions by examining the most prominent and recent judgments of the Court of Justice of the European Union. Experts from all over the world not just from academia but also government and judiciary representatives as well as tax practitioners have provided their input and helped us compile what is an informative and worthy read for anyone dealing with indirect taxation on a professional basis.
