Atlas of Forensic Pathology Joseph A. Prahlow, Roger W. Byard, 2011-12-21 This book is specifically designed for non pathologists who normally interact with forensic pathologists. It covers topics within forensic pathology including the forensic autopsy postmortem changes and time of death and body identification

Essentials of Sea Survival Frank Golden, Michael Tipton, 2002 Essentials of Sea Survival contains original scientific research and investigations from two internationally recognized experts on cold water survival. In addition to having practical personal experience with cold water immersion Frank Golden and Michael Tipton regularly lecture at various international conferences about water survival and they are frequently called on for expert commentary on television and radio. The majority of books on this subject are personal survival accounts few relate to scientific studies. This book is different. Using reader friendly language two leading environmental physiologists present the facts and dispel the myths of surviving a sea accident. The book, thanks to the real life stories and easy to read format will appeal primarily to the layperson who works or plays on or near the water. The text will also be of interest to an academic audience who will appreciate the original research and up to date physiological and medical information. Essentials of Sea Survival is a compelling informative and comprehensive guide to open water survival. Drawing from classic maritime disasters and personal accounts of near miraculous survival as well as carefully controlled laboratory experiments it offers practical advice for avoiding as well as surviving a cold water accident. It's an important reference for anyone associated with open air aquatic activities such as members of the Coast Guard, Navy and Marines, offshore oil rig employees, fishermen, divers, amateur and professional sailors, water safety instructors and life guards, water rescue personnel, boaters, water skiers, outdoor survival course instructors and other recreational water sports enthusiasts.

This book is designed to introduce law students legal actors and human rights activists particularly participants in human rights dialogues with China to the process and reality of a newly confident China s participation in the international human rights system albeit with inherent challenges From an international and comparative perspective one of the key findings of the author s research is that progress towards human rights depends more on judges than on legislators Chinese legislators have enacted a series of reforms in order to better protect human rights Unfortunately these reforms have not led to greater adherence to China s international human rights obligations in practice The reforms failed because they have generally been misunderstood by Chinese judges who often have a limited understanding of international human rights norms Specifically this book will examine how judicial misunderstandings have blocked reforms in one specific area the use of severe punishments based on international human rights theory and case studies and data analyses This examination has several purposes The first is to suggest that China ratify the ICCPR as the next step for its substantive progress in human rights and as a good preparation for its re applying to be a member of the UN Human Right Council in the future The second is to explain how judges could be better educated in international human rights norms so as to greatly reduce the use of severe punishments and better comply with China s human rights obligations The third is to demonstrate how the international community could better engage with China in a manner that is more conducive to human rights improvements The author s ultimate goal is to enhance dialogue on human rights in China between judges and the Chinese government between Chinese judges and their foreign counterparts and between China s government and the international community Another significant aim of this book is to clarify the controversial question of what obligations China should undertake before its ratification of the ICCPR and to re examine trends in its developing human rights policy after standing down from the Council in late 2012 The tortuous progress of China s criminal law and criminal justice reforms has confirmed that Chinese judges need further instruction on how to apply severe punishments in a manner consistent with international standards Judges should be encouraged to exercise more discretion when sentencing so that penalties reflect the intent of relevant domestic laws as well as the international human rights standards enumerated in the ICCPR In order to better educate and train judges this book contains introductory chapters that examine the severe punishments currently available to Chinese judges from an international human rights perspective To illustrate how Chinese justice currently falls short of international norms this paper also examines several cases that are considered to be indicative of China's progress towards greater respect for human rights and the rule of law These cases demonstrate that China still has a long way to go to achieve its goals at least before abolishing the death penalty forced labor and torture
