Infertility prevalence estimates, 1990-2021 World Health Organization, 2023-04-04 Infertility is a disease of the male or female reproductive system defined by the failure to achieve a pregnancy after 12 months or more of regular unprotected sexual intercourse. Understanding the magnitude of infertility is critical for developing appropriate interventions for monitoring access to quality fertility care and for mitigating risk factors for and consequences of infertility. The objective of this report is to provide estimates of the global and regional prevalence of infertility by analyzing all relevant studies from 1990 to 2021 taking into account different study approaches. This report also provides insight into how the estimation of infertility prevalence can be improved to obtain more reliable and actionable data. It is anticipated that these estimates will improve the understanding of the burden of infertility and provide a basis for appropriate policies and services to achieve universal access to fertility care.
