Physical Processes in Lakes and Oceans Jorg Imberger,1998      Physical Processes in a Large Lake Setsuo Okuda,1995-01-09 Published by the American Geophysical Union as part of the Coastal and Estuarine Studies Volume 48 Lake Biwa is very important in a social context It is the largest lake in Japan and presently supplies some 15 million people in four prefectures Shiga Kyoto Osaka and Hyogo with drinking water making it the single most important source of water in Japan It is also important from a geographical perspective It is a natural lake born some five million years ago and is therefore geologically one of the oldest lakes in the world      Water Resources Systems--water Availability and Global Change Stewart W. Franks,2003      Saline Lakes John M. Melack,Robert Jellison,David B. Herbst,2002-04-30 Publications from 7th International Conference on Salt Lakes held in Death Valley National Park California USA September 1999

Freshwater Management M. Kumagai,2003-04 The management of water supply and quality in lakes rivers and reservoirs has proceeded largely on the basis of local rather than global considerations High quality freshwater resources are now in critically short supply not only because of local problems such as over irrigation and eutrophication but also as a result of large scale impacts such as climate effects on the hydrosphere This book explores the dichotomy of global strategies international and generic versus local strategies site specific for lake river and reservoir management and presents a series of contrasting perspectives on topics that include monitoring modeling water treatment eutrophication and restoration The final chapter integrates these perspectives and identifies strengths weaknesses and complementary aspects of the two approaches to help refine future strategies for the sustainable use of the world s freshwater resources      Hydrobiological Modelling Brian J. Williams,2006 The book describes models of aquatic ecosystems ranging from lakes to estuaries to the deep ocean It provides a background in the physical and biological processes numerical methods and elementary ecosystem models It describes two of the most widely used hydrodynamic models and presents a number of case studies The practice of modelling in management is discussed      The Great Lakes of the World (GLOW) M. Munawar,R. E. Hecky,2001 This compendium contains a wide variety of current research on temperate and tropical great lakes with a common thread being the health and integrity of these important systems The promise of this book is that it will enhance our understanding of how large lakes function and thereby provide the tools necessary to ensure their continuing and viability      Geomorphology of Lake-Catchment Systems Kenji Kashiwaya,2017-07-24 This book presents the study of limnogeomorphology in which past proxy data such as lacustrine sediments with information on landform development can be linked to modern observed data acquired by instruments including hydro geomorphological and sedimentary data Traditionally in the field of earth sciences it has been thought that geophysical studies dealing mainly with the present process were not smoothly linked to geological studies that originated from historical studies Although such earth surface process studies are closely related to those on historical landform development in the field of geomorphology they have been studied separately Those two geomorphology studies correspond to process geomorphology dynamic geomorphology and historical geomorphology There have been some attempts to combine them however they lacked past quantitative records available for further analyses In the study of limnogeomorphology proxy data can be converted to quantitative information to be utilized in future environmental discussions This book also covers information not only on large lake catchment systems but on small systems Those include long term and short term and large scale and small scale environmental changes in east Eurasia such as Lake Baikal Lake Khuvsgul Lake Biwa and small lakes in Japan Mongolia China and Korea
