Stylistic Boundaries Among Mobile Hunter Foragers:

Stylistic Boundaries Among Mobile Hunter-foragers Claval Garth Sampson,1988 In this study of the valley wide distributions of South African decorative motifs Sampson pioneers a methodology for etching band territories out of the archaeological surface trace left by mobile hunter forager societies Social Identities Among Archaic Mobile Hunters and Gatherers of the American Southwest Maxine McBrinn,2005 The mobile hunters and gatherers of the Archaic Southwest were members of at least three different kinds of social groups bands endogamous marriage groups and a risk sharing economic network By comparing the geographic distributions of conological and technological style in cordage sandals and projectile points it is possible to distinguish marriage groups from the larger economic networks Using artifacts from Bat Cave Tularosa Cave and Cordova Cave in the New Mexico Mogollon and from Fresnal Shelter in the Tularosa Basin this research demonstrated that technological style in fiber artifacts is more geographically constrained than iconological style in sandals or projectile points indicating that although the bands using these rock shelters came from different marriage groups they participated in the same risk sharing economic network

Style and Function Teresa D. Hurt,Gordon Rakita,2000-10-30 The topics of style and function within evolutionary archaeology have been the subject of great debate in the field of archaeology in general over the past two decades Evolutionary archaeologists have a unique perspective on these concepts one that has sometimes been misunderstood by archaeologists working within other theoretical perspectives The dichotomy between style and function was first formulated in the late 1970s by Robert Dunnell and remains axiomatic within the theoretical perspective of evolutionary archaeology The original definitions of style and function were grounded in biological evolutionary concepts regarding neutral variation versus variation that is subject to natural selection Several chapters expand upon these concepts and explore how Darwinian evolutionary theory may be used to understand the archaeological record Other chapters demonstrate this application through empirical case studies Dunnell provides a foreword introducing and re examining his original thesis This volume is the only text devoted to the topic of style and function within the literature of evolutionary archaeology It provides not only theoretical discussions and augmentation but also significant historical background regarding the development of the style function distinction within archaeology Moreover it presents several case studies that provide examples of how evolutionary style and function may be applied to the prehistoric record

Deep-Time Images in the Age of Globalization Oscar Moro Abadía,Margaret W. Conkey,Josephine McDonald,2024-05-13 This open access volume explores the impact of globalization on the contemporary study of deep time art The volume explores how early rock art research s Eurocentric biases have shifted with broadened global horizons to facilitate new conversations and discourses in new post colonial realities The book uses seven main themes to explore theoretical methodological ethical and practical developments that are orienting the study of Pleistocene and Holocene arts in the age of globalization Compiling studies as diverse as genetics visualization with the proliferation of increasingly sophisticated archaeological techniques means that vast quantities of materials and techniques are now incorporated into the analysis of the world's visual cultures. Deep Time Images in the Age of Globalization aims to promote critical reflection on the multitude of positive and negative impacts that globalization has wrought in rock art research. The volume brings new theoretical frameworks as well as engagement with indigenous knowledge and perspectives from art history. It highlights technical methodological and interpretive developments and showcases rock art characteristics from previously unknown in the global north geographic areas. This book provides comparative approaches on rock art globally and scrutinises the impacts of globalization on research, preservation and management of deep time art. This book will appeal to archaeologists, social scientists and art historians working in the field as well as lovers of rock art.

Archaeology at the Millennium

Gary M. Feinman, T. Douglas Price, 2007-09-27. In this book internationally distinguished contributors consider hot topics in turn of the millennium archaeology and chart an ambitious agenda for the future.

Gender in African Prehistory

Susan Kent, 2000-01-01. Gender in African Prehistory provides methods and theories for delineating and discussing prehistoric gender relations and their change through time. Sites studied range from Egypt to South Africa and Ghana to Tanzania while time periods span the Stone Age to the period just prior to colonialization.

African Foragers

Sibel Barut Kusimba, 2003. Foraging bands were the quintessential form of human social organization for most of prehistory. Current arguments rage on the genesis of the contemporary descendants of these hunter gatherers and their applicability to our understanding of lifeways before agriculture and domestication of animals. Sibel Barut Kusimba addresses this debate by synthesizing the archaeological evidence in Africa from the Middle Stone Age to the present where the greatest time depth of foraging cultures can be traced. She develops a comprehensive picture of these foundational human societies their social and technological adaptations to environmental conditions and the impact of interaction from later economic systems on their lifeways. The book should be of importance to both cultural and archaeological anthropologists and their students.

BAR International Series

1997. San Jacinto 1. Augusto Oyuela-Caycedo, Renee M. Bonzani, 2005. A significant work of neotropical archaeology presenting evidence of early hunter gatherers who produced fiber tempered ceramics. Few topics in the development of humans have prompted as much interest and debate as those of the origins of pottery and agriculture. The first appearance of pottery in any area of the world is heralded as a new stage in the progress of humans toward a more complex arrangement of thought and society. Cultures are defined and separated by the occurrence of pottery types and the association of pottery with mobility and agriculture continues to drive research in anthropology. For these reasons the discovery of the earliest fiber tempered pottery in the New World and carbonized remains identified as maize kernels is exciting. San Jacinto 1 is the archaeological site located in the savanna region of the north coast of Colombia, South America where excavations led by the authors have revealed evidence of mobile hunter gatherers who made pottery and who collected and processed plants from 6000 to 5000 B.P. The site is believed to show an early human adaptation to the tropics.

in the context of significant environmental changes that were taking place at the time This volume presents the data gathered and the interpretations made during excavation and analysis of the San Jacinto 1 site By examining the social activities of a human population in a highly seasonal environment it adds greatly to our contemporary understanding of the historical ecology of the tropics Study of the artifacts excavated at the site allows a window into the early processes of food production in the New World Finally the data reveals that the origins of ceramic technology in the tropics were tied to a reduction in mobility and an increase in territoriality and are widely applicable to similar studies of sedentism and agriculture worldwide Journal of Middle Atlantic Archaeology ,2001
