The Last Days of a Condemned; from the French ... Victor Hugo,1840 Narrative Fiction and Death occupied in observing nature for the advantage of art a philosopher a poet who having been seized with these forcible ideas could not rest until he had given them the tangible form of a volume Of these two explanations the reader will choose that which he prefers As is seen at the time when this book was first published the author did not deem fit to give publicity to the full extent of his thoughts He preferred waiting to see whether the work would be fully understood It has been The author may now therefore unmask the political and social ideas which he wished to render popular under this harmless literary guise He avows openly that The Last Day of a Condemned is only a pleading direct or indirect as is preferred for the abolition of the penalty of death His design herein and what he would wish posterity to see in his work if its attention should ever be given to so slight a production is not to make out the special defense of any particular criminal such defense being transitory as it is easy he would plead generally and permanently for all accused persons present and future it is the great point of human right stated and pleaded before society at large that highest judicial court it is the sombre and fatal question which breathes obscurely in the depths of each capital offense under the triple envelopes of pathos in which legal eloquence wraps them it is the question of life and death I say laid bare denuded and despoiled of the sonorous twistings of the bar revealed in daylight and placed where it should be seen in its true and hideous position not in the law courts but on the scaffold not among the judges but with the executioner This is what he has desired to effect If futurity should award him the glory of having succeeded which he dares not hope he desires no other crown The Century-Cyclopedia of Names Smith,1894
