Superoxide Dismutase Vol I:

Enzymatic Basis of Detoxication Volume 1 William B. Jakoby, 1980-10-28 Enzymatic Basis of Detoxication Volume I focuses on the catalytic mechanisms and physiological expression of the enzymes that are involved in the detoxication of foreign compounds. The book explores foreign compound metabolism at the level of what specific enzymes can do. This book is organized into three sections and comprised of 17 chapters. The discussion begins with an overview of detoxication and covers both catalytic and non catalytic removal of foreign substances along with the general properties of the enzymes that are active in detoxication. The reader is then introduced to the physiological aspects of detoxication paying particular attention to the kinetic aspects of metabolism and elimination of foreign compounds in animals, human genetic variation in detoxication enzymes and how such enzymes are induced. The next section focuses on mixed function oxygenase systems and includes chapters on cytochrome P 450 and the detoxication reactions it catalyzes. The book also considers other oxidation reduction systems with reference to alcohol dehydrogenase, aldehyde reductase, aldehyde oxidizing enzymes, ketone reductases, xanthine oxidase and aldehyde oxidase, glutathione peroxidase and superoxide dismutases. The final chapter is devoted to monoamine oxidase, its properties, substrate specificity, inhibitors, kinetics and mechanism and multiple forms. Pharmacologists, toxicologists and biochemists will find this book extremely helpful.

Programmed Cell Death, Volume I S. Estus, V. Rangnekar, M.P. Mattson, 2001 Apoptosis or programmed cell death is an adaptive form of cell death that plays a critical role in turnover of mitotic cells and various tissues in the adult including epithelial cells, fibroblasts and various endocrine cells. Programmed cell death also plays a major role in development in organizing the body plan and molding intricate cellular structures such as nerve cell circuits in the brain. Rapidly progressing research into the molecular and biochemical underpinnings of the programmed cell death process are revealing novel genetic programs and molecular interactions that coordinate a process that results in death and removal of cells without an immune response and in the absence of the adverse effects on neighboring cells. Programmed Cell Death Volume I critically details the molecular, biochemical and cellular mechanisms of apoptosis. This volume covers programmed cell death in a variety of tissues and organ systems highlighting the interesting families of proteins involved in promoting or preventing apoptosis. These include the caspase and calpain families of proteases, Bcl 2 family members and inhibitors of apoptosis proteins. Each chapter is written by an internationally recognized expert in a particular aspect of programmed cell death. This book will provide the reader with a comprehensive understanding of the cascade of events leading from an apoptotic signal such as trophic factor withdrawal or increased oxidative stress to cell death. Importantly, this volume also covers signaling mechanisms designed to prevent apoptosis. Such anti apoptotic signaling cascades involve neurotrophic factors and stress response pathways. Programmed Cell Death Volume I provides the molecular and cellular foundation for <http://www.elsevier.com/locate/ISBN0444507302> Programmed Cell Death Volume II in which the roles of aberrant regulation of apoptosis in human diseases

Biomimetic and Bioorganic Chemistry II F. Vögtle, E. Weber, 1986-04-01 HDBK METHODS FOR OXYGEN RADICAL RESEARCH Robert A. Greenwald, 1985-12-20

This book addresses the problem of cross-fertilization of methods from one lab to another, from one discipline to another, by allowing experts in the techniques free rein to describe the methods in detail, including specification of the source of reagents, pitfalls likely to be encountered, and other subtleties of the trade. This volume is divided into five sections. Section I deals with preparative methodology for isolation and purification of the components of the oxy radical experimental systems used most frequently, including all the three forms of SOD and several other important scavengers. Section II provides the experimenter with a choice of dozen oxy radical generating systems which can be used for testing of scavengers or for evaluation of the effects of oxy radicals on target tissues. In section III, a large number of analytic techniques are presented for quantitation of both the radicals and their scavengers. In Section IV, cellular phenomena are described including both generating systems and detection systems as well as methods of enhancing cellular scavenger levels Section V covers a number of miscellaneous techniques that are frequently cited in the literature

Batt, 1989-04-30 This three volume text provides a comprehensive review and reference source for those with a teaching research or practical involvement in alcohol metabolism in humans Written by 70 contributing authors from 12 countries this publication covers a wide range of material from medicolegal aspects of alcohol metabolism to the structure of enzymes involved in metabolizing alcohol Although primarily concerned with human alcohol metabolism information from animal experiments is included where it clarifies results of human studies or where information for human subjects is not available

Environmental Physiology Melvin J. Fregly, Clark M. Blatteis, 1996 Thirty years have passed since the last edition of this volume was published Since then many advances have occurred in the field of environmental physiology Established areas of research have been expanded by the application of new concepts and the use of more modern tools while other areas then in their infancy have developed into important subjects of current research The latter include for example research in the physiological adaptations and acclimations to underwater and space environments to microorganisms responsible for acute inflammatory diseases and to psychosocial stress All of the chapters in this book were written by international investigators noted for their individual contributions to the areas that they cover The focus of their presentations addresses the regulatory mechanisms of the physiological responses to the many factors constituting the external environment Each contribution has been subjected to a rigorous review process in order to ensure its relevance and timeliness At the same time innovative and even controversial interpretations were not rejected so that the material in this volume represents the most up to date understanding of and debate over the physiological adaptation to the environment
