The Museum in Transition Hilde S. Hein,2000 During the past thirty years museums of all kinds have tried to become more responsive to the interests of a diverse public by shifting from the presentation of real things to the production of experiences With exhibitions becoming people centered idea oriented and contextualized the boundaries between museums and the real world are becoming eroded and museum professionals now admit to having a hand in the creation of reality Design and spectacle have become central elements of display while the integrity of the object once the focal point of museum exhibition ultimately has given way to more interpretive devices Setting the transition from object centered to story centered exhibitions in a philosophical framework Hilde S Hein contends that glorifying the museum experience at the expense of objects deflects the museum's educative, ethical and aesthetic roles. Referring to institutions ranging from art museums to theme parks, she shows how deployment has replaced amassing as a goal and discusses how museums now actively shape and create values. She is critical of the dominating influence on all museums of an aesthetic of art works in art museums and proposes a more integrative museum aesthetic. Suggesting the current emphasis on experience and multiple perspectives may be replacing an old monolithic value with a new one, Hein urges museums to amplify and sharpen their distinctions from one another. She argues that rather than striving to be all inclusive, they should render more poignant, more precise and more precious the magnitude of their audience's differences and the multitude of its agreements.
