Legislators must ensure that the CDOs are actually accessible to companies for all transactions, otherwise it is their obligation. This may be done in many ways. For example, companies may bring the CDO to market as an investment vehicle, or the companies may introduce companies to the CDO through a different source, but each action which enables or assists in a company's access to the CDO is the issue of a company's obligation to other companies. Furthermore, companies may need to designate a person responsible for obtaining and maintaining the CDO. If the company does not maintain an CDO, the company is designated as a company that is not a company.
