Benjamin Hurlbut,Hava Tirosh-Samuelson,2016-02-22 Humans have always imagined better futures From the desire to overcome death to the aspiration to dominion over the world imaginations of the technological future reveal the commitments values and norms of those who construct them Today the human future is thrown into question by emerging technologies that promise radical control over human life and elicit corollary imaginations of human perfectibility This interdisciplinary volume assembles scholars of science and technology studies sociology philosophy theology ethics and history to examine imaginations of technological progress that promises to transcend the constraints of human body and being Attending in particular to transhumanist and posthumanist visions the volume breaks new ground by exploring their utopian and eschatological dimensions and situating them within a broader context of ideas institutions and practices of innovation The volume invites specialists and general readers to explore the stakes of contemporary imaginations of technological innovation as a source of progress a force of social and historical transformation and as the defining essence of human life

The Thinking Machine Charles Judson Herrick, 1929 This is a book about the natural history of human nature It is not a book about philosophy for philosophers It is a plain and straightforward statement for ordinary people of what another very ordinary sort of man who has considerable experience with the mechanisms of human life and how they work thinks about it all We all want to understand human nature better because it is our nature The better we understand it the more likely we are to get along with ourselves our neighbors and our surroundings in general We want to make life more worth while to get as much out of it as we can and to put as much into it as we can to make a better living and to have as much fun doing it as possible We need to know how we live what the apparatus of life is and how it works in order to make a better job of it
