The Making Of International Agreements:

International Agreements between Non-State Actors as a Source of International Law Melissa Loja, 2022-09-22 This book examines whether international agreements between non state actors can be identified as a source of international law using objective criteria It asks whether beyond Article 38 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice there is a system of rules processes beliefs or semantics by which these agreements can be objectively identified as a source of international law Departing from the more usual state centric analysis it adopts postmodern legal positivism as its analytical tool This allows for the reality that international law making takes place in subjective social landscapes To test the effectiveness of this approach it is applied to agreements between petroleum agencies and corporations which allow two or more states to exploit disputed resources across boundaries looking in particular at arrangements involving China Vietnam and the Philippines By so doing it illustrates an alternative way that states can manage disputes without having to resort to conflict It will appeal to both scholars and practitioners of public international law as well as civil servants in International Law Jan Klabbers, 2023-09-25 Whether or not a certain norm is legally binding upon international actors may often depend on whether or not the instrument which contains the norm is to be regarded as a treaty In this study the author argues that instruments which contain commitments are ex hypothesi treaties In doing so he challenges popular notions proclaiming the existence of morally and politically binding agreements and so called soft law Such notions Klabbers argues are internally inconsistent and founded upon untenable presumptions Moreover they find little support in the pertinent decisions of municipal and international courts and tribunals The book addresses issues of importance not only for academics working in international law constitutional law and political science but also for practitioners involved in the making implementation and enforcement of international agreements

Conclusion Des Traités Council of Europe, British Institute of International and Comparative Law, 2001-09-12 Treaty making constitutes the very basis of the international legal order and influences international relations It channels the expression by States of consent to be bound and defines the commitments they enter into However the national procedures by which States express their consent to be bound vary considerably depending on constitutional legal and political conditions which reflect the history of each country The report drawn up under the aegis of the Committee of Legal Advisers on Public International Law CAHDI of the Council of Europe encompasses the practice of thirty nine member States of this Organisation and a number of observer States It provides comprehensive and up to date information about these States means of expressing consent to be bound by a treaty Furthermore the analysis commissioned by the CAHDI from the British Institute of International and Comparative Law casts fresh light on this matter by inferring interesting considerations from the diversity of national procedures With this report the Council of Europe wishes to pursue its practical contribution to the development of international law facilitating the mutual understanding of its member States and thus helping to build a stable and peaceful international community La conclusion des traités constitue la base même de l'ordre juridique international et exerce une influence sur les relations internationales Elle véhicule l'expression du consentement des États et définit les engagements qu'ils souscrivent Cependant les procédures nationales par lesquelles les États expriment leur consentement varient considérablement en fonction de facteurs constitutionnels juridiques et politiques qui reflètent l'histoire même de chaque pays Le présent rapport laborieux du Comité des Conseillers Juridiques sur le droit international public CAHDI du Conseil de l'Europe expose la pratique de trente neuf États membres de cette Organisation ainsi que d'un certain nombre d'États observateurs Il fournit des informations complètes et jour sur les moyens par lesquels ces États expriment leur consentement et lient par un traité En outre l'analyse confiée par le CAHDI à l'Institut britannique de droit international et de droit comparé apporte un clairage nouveau ce domaine en tirant des enseignements intéressants de la diversité des procédures nationales Par ce rapport le Conseil de l'Europe souhaite poursuivre sa contribution pratique au développement du droit international en facilitant la compréhension mutuelle de ses États membres et en contribuant ainsi à la construction d'une communauté internationale stable

The Making of International Law Alan E. Boyle,C. M. Chinkin,2007 Every society perceives the need to differentiate between its legal norms and other norms controlling social economic and political behavior But unlike domestic legal systems where this distinction is typically determined by constitutional provisions the decentralized nature of the international legal system makes this a complex and contested issue Moreover contemporary international law is often the product of a subtle and evolving interplay of law making instruments both binding and non binding and of customary law and general principles Only in this broader context can the significance of so called soft law and multilateral treaties be fully appreciated This volume analyzes the principal negotiating processes and law making tools through which contemporary international law is made and identifies the processes participants and instruments employed It accordingly examines some of the mechanisms and procedures whereby new rules of law are created or old rules are amended or abrogated and concentrates on the UN
