The Effects of Structural Relations on Transfer [by] Z.P. Dienes [and] M.A. Jeeves ,1970

The Effects of Structural Relations on Transfer Zoltan Paul

Dienes, Malcolm A. Jeeves, 1970 Linking Perception and Cognition Michela C. Tacca, 2013 Perception and cognition are tightly related. As our primary mode of contact with the world perception is the informational and causal foundation of our cognitive processes. It is fundamental to our empirical thinking, believing and action planning. Traditional accounts of the mind consider perception and cognition to be distinct yet highly interrelated systems. Much interdisciplinary empirical and theoretical work from cognitive scientists and philosophers has attempted to elucidate the complex relations holding among these systems, suggesting the existence not only of influences of perception on cognition but also vice versa. However, many questions are left unanswered. Given that perception is a guide to our thinking about and acting upon the world appropriately, the two systems must be able to talk to one another. Information carried by perception must be of a form adequate to be taken in by our various cognitive systems. The question arises: What kinds of structural similarities must hold between perceptual and cognitive representations for such communication to be possible? And how exactly do perceptual and cognitive representations interact? Some researchers have argued that the links between perception and cognition are so tight as to instill doubt as to the significance of the distinction between the two systems in the first place. Yet others insist that perception and cognition remain distinct. The aim of this Research Topic is to deepen our understanding of the kinds of interaction among perception and cognition and of the nature of the representational structures that would enable such interaction.

Provided by publisher Relational Capital in Business Rafał Drewniak, Urszula Ślupska, Zbigniew Drewniak, Iwona Posadzińska, Robert Karaszewski, 2023-12-19. The concept of relational capital mainly refers to the value of the relationships a company creates with its stakeholders. These relationships inspired the authors to analyze their importance in the context of creating value for the enterprise and to explore the importance of leadership and communication in building relationships with the environment. Internal relational capital refers to the organization's set of intellectual property, work processes and methods, executive procedures, databases, communication and information infrastructure. Employee relations and leadership activities become pivotal in this context as improving relational competence and intra-organizational relational capital can foster building lasting relationships with external stakeholders. This book comprises two parts. The first is devoted to discussing the most important concepts and issues related to the essence and importance of relational capital in modern companies, characterizing methods and tools for building relational capital while pointing to the role of leadership in shaping employee engagement and building intra-organizational relationships. The second part contains the results of empirical research on the importance of relational capital in organizations from the point of view of managers and the features and scope of maintained relationships with stakeholders. This research allowed for the evaluation of ongoing relationships in terms of how they improved innovation, financial performance or access to resources. The book will be especially valuable to researchers, academics, professionals and advanced students in the fields of organizational studies, employment relations and leadership.
