

The National Advertising Division (NAD) and its National Programs provide independent self-regulation and consumer resolution services, publishing the Guidelines for Advertising which the NAD enforces. National advertising is self-regulated and its division is self-consistent, standards, rule of law, having truth and accuracy, delivering meaningful protection to consumers and providing the greatest benefit for businesses.

Policy issues are handled through nation-wide joint monitoring of advertising claims or through "challenge" or investigating claims filed by consumers, companies, or public interest groups. This digest includes excerpts from key telecommunications cases. Each case involves consideration of the claims made in the advertising and testing, and the supporting evidence provided by the advertiser.

Compliance with NAD decisions is voluntary. Nevertheless, NAD enjoys a high rate of compliance. Advertisers that either refuse to participate in the self-regulatory process or who not implement the NAD recommendations are referred to appropriate enforcement agencies such as the Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

AT&T Services, Inc.

AT&T Fiber

Case #68550 (June 2021)

NAD recommended that AT&T stop advertising that its fiber service is "fast enough for everything" because the implied claim that consumers can use the service for video chat, up to 4K video, and other high-speed activities is false. NAD also recommended that AT&T stop advertising that its fiber service is "fast enough for everything" because the implied claim that users can use the service for video chat, up to 4K video, and other high-speed activities is false.

NAD recommended that AT&T stop advertising that its fiber service is "fast enough for everything" because the implied claim that users can use the service for video chat, up to 4K video, and other high-speed activities is false.

NAD also recommended that AT&T stop advertising that its fiber service is "fast enough for everything" by avoid conveying the impression that users can use the service for video chat, up to 4K video, and other high-speed activities. NAD also recommended that AT&T stop advertising that its fiber service is "fast enough for everything" by avoiding conveying the impression that users can use the service for video chat, up to 4K video, and other high-speed activities.

The advertiser appealed NAD's decision to the National Advertising Review Board (NARB). The appeal is pending.

Charter Communications, Inc.

Spectrum Internet Speed

Case #68448 (May 2021)

NAD recommended that Charter discontinue the implied claims in the "Welcome Back Party" commercial that (1) AT&T internet is too slow for certain activities, including streaming, and (2) AT&T does not offer speeds that exceed 200 Mbps. The NAB's Measuring Broadband America Final Broadcast Report, Federal Communications Commission (2020), NAD was not persuaded that AT&T's lack of participation in the collection of data for the TestNet FCC Broadband Report should compel any inference relating to its internet speeds. In reaching this conclusion that a broad subscriber claim could not be supported, NAD did not further conclude that the data collected for internet speeds experienced by customers of one particular ISP, including Spectrum, was
