Historic Landscapes of Britain from the Air

Robin Edgar Glasscock,1992-10-29 Britain, France and the Decolonization of Africa Andrew W.M. Smith,Chris Jeppesen,2017-03-01 Looking at decolonization in the conditional tense this volume teases out the complex and uncertain ends of British and French empire in Africa during the period of late colonial shift after 1945 Rather than view decolonization as an inevitable process the contributors together explore the crucial historical moments in which change was negotiated compromises were made and debates were staged Three core themes guide the analysis development contingency and entanglement The chapters consider the ways in which decolonization was governed and moderated by concerns about development and profit A complementary focus on contingency allows deeper consideration of how colonial powers planned for colonial futures and how divergent voices greeted the end of empire Thinking about entanglements likewise stresses both the connections that existed between the British and French empires in Africa and those that endured beyond the formal transfer of power

Architectures of survival is an original and innovative work of history that investigates the relationship between air war and urbanism in modern Britain It asks how the development of airpower and the targeting of cities influenced perceptions of urban spaces and visions of urban futures from the interwar period into the Cold War highlighting the importance of war and the anticipation of war in modern urban history Airpower created a permanent threat to cities and civilians and this book considers how architects planners and government officials reframed bombing as an ongoing urban problem rather than one contingent to a particular conflict It draws on archival material from local and national government architectural and town planning journals and cultural texts to demonstrate how cities were recast as targets and planning for defence and planning for development became increasingly entangled
