Technology-Mediated Communication Urs E. Gattiker, Rosemarie S. Stollenmaier, 2012-02-13 No detailed description available for Technology Mediated Communication Words on the Web Simon Shurville, Lynn Pemberton, 2000-12-01 Recent developments in technology have made this a crucial moment for those people studying language behaviour This book places the reader at the heart of the investigations into what happens when people use language to communicate via computers New communication technologies video conferencing email and the World Wide Web have provided a whole new range of ways to interact with others and students can now observe the emergence and rapid development of linguistic and social conventions for using these media The studies in this volume consider what people say when interacting with others via new technologies and the ways in which we mould and combine the written the spoken and the non verbal in order to express ourselves effectively within the confines of the new media available to us The breadth of activities covered here is extensive including informal activities such as email and chat room use educational uses of CMC for collaborative learning and language practice integration of CMC into formal work practice for instance in an ambulance dispatch centre The scope of the book ranges from Conversation Analysis to Genre Theory and from Social Psychology to Politeness Theory There is much to contemplate for both designers of new communication as well as those commissioning and buying these technologies for our homes schools and workplaces The collection of work here has been edited to recognise the range of disciplines looking to this field and is of direct interest to any linguist psychologist or other social scientist working in the study of human communication Computer-mediated Communication Susan B. Barnes, 2003 All manner of computer mediated communication or CMC is considered in this textbook The phenomenon of CMC its development and current research and the three types of Internet communication interpersonal human computer interaction and informational are described at length Computer-mediated Communication Susan C. Herring, 1996-01-01 Text based interaction among humans connected via computer networks such as takes place via email and in synchronous modes such as chat MUDs and MOOs has attracted considerable popular and scholarly attention This collection of 14 articles on text based computer mediated communication CMC is the first to bring empirical evidence from a variety of disciplinary perspectives to bear on questions raised by the new medium The first section linguistic perspectives addresses the question of how CMC compares with speaking and writing and describes its unique structural characteristics Section two on social and ethical perspectives explores conflicts between the interests of groups and those of individual users including issues of online sex and sexism In the third section cross cultural perspectives the advantages and risks of using CMC to communicate across cultures are examined in three studies involving users in East Asia Mexico and students of ethnically diverse backgrounds in remedial writing classes in the United States The final section deals with the effects of CMC on group interaction in a women s studies mailing list a hierarchically organized workplace and a public protest on the Internet against corporate interests
