Social Choice And Multicriterion Decision Making:

Social Choice and Multicriterion Decision-making Kenneth Joseph Arrow, Hervé Raynaud, 1986-01 This study comes to grips with the industrial outranking problem one of the major outstanding problems of current operations research and managerial decision making The problem simply stated is this given a large but finite set of criteria and a large but finite number of alternatives how can the criteria be ranked in priority order and how should the alternatives be ranked from best to worst consistent with the ordering of criteria that may be conflicting or incommensurable There have been many proposed solutions to the problem Numerous empirical recipes among them the majority method have been submitted based in large part on the subjective judgments and biases of various observers The authors argue that the axiomatic formulation offers the surest path to a solution that is as objective as possible minimally distorted by the unwitting imposition of personal values They then develop a system of consistent and appealing axioms confront the paradoxes that put axiomatic systems in general at risk and demonstrate the applicability of their system to realistic industrial outranking problems Even within the axiomatic framework however some leeway remains for subjective choice and conscious value decisions One ad hoc criterion of choice the authors selected was that their method should be neither so flexible and open that personal biases might easily slip in nor so artificially rigid that the play of intuition and creativity was systematically excluded The book also takes a hard look at the theoretical and practical defects of the majority method the favored proposed solution and at such associated issues as committee decision techniques strategic majority voting and restriction conditions Kenneth A Arrow who was awarded the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics in 1972 is Joan Kenny Professor of Economics and Professor of Operations Research at Stanford University Herve Raynaud is Professor University of Grenoble France Decision Making Process Denis Bouyssou, Didier Dubois, Henri Prade, Marc Pirlot, 2013-05-10 This book provides an overview of the main methods and results in the formal study of the human decision making process as defined in a relatively wide sense A key aim of the approach contained here is to try to break down barriers between various disciplines encompassed by this field including psychology economics and computer science All these approaches have contributed to progress in this very important and much studied topic in the past but none have proved sufficient so far to define a complete understanding of the highly complex processes and outcomes This book provides the reader with state of the art coverage of the field essentially forming a roadmap to the field of decision analysis The first part of the book is devoted to basic concepts and techniques for representing and solving decision problems ranging from operational research to artificial intelligence Later chapters provide an extensive overview of the decision making process under conditions of risk and uncertainty Finally there are chapters covering various approaches to multi criteria decision making Each chapter is written by experts in the topic concerned and contains an extensive bibliography for further reading and reference Multicriterion Decision in Management Jean-Charles Pomerol, Sergio Barba-Romero, 2012-12-06 Multicriterion Decision in Management Principles and Practice is the first multicriterion analysis book devoted exclusively to discrete multicriterion decision making Typically multicriterion analysis is used in two distinct frameworks Firstly there is multiple criteria linear programming which is an extension of the results of linear programming and its associated algorithms Secondly there is discrete multicriterion decision making which is concerned with choices among a finite number of possible alternatives such as projects investments decisions etc This is the focus of this book The book concentrates on the basic principles in the domain of discrete multicriterion analysis and examines each of these principles in terms of their properties and their implications In multicriterion decision analysis any optimum in the strict sense of the term does not exist Rather multicriterion decision making utilizes tools methods and thinking to examine several solutions each having their advantages and disadvantages depending on one's point of view Actually various methods exist for reaching a good choice in a multicriterion setting and even a complete ranking of the alternatives The book describes and compares these methods so called aggregation methods with their advantages and their shortcomings Clearly organizations are becoming more complex and it is becoming harder and harder to disregard complexity of points of view motivations and objectives The day of the single objective profit social environment etc is over and the wishes of all those involved in all their diversity must be taken into account To do this a basic knowledge of multicriterion decision analysis is necessary The objective of this book is to supply that knowledge and enable it to be applied The book is intended for use by practitioners managers consultants researchers and students in engineering and business
