Standard Relational and Network Database Languages E.J. Yannakoudakis, C.P. Cheng, 2012-12-06 For any type of software to become standard whether a third generation language or an integrated project support environment IPSE it must undergo a series of modifications and updates which are a direct result of theoretical and empirical knowledge gained in the process The database approach to the design of general purpose information systems has undergone a series of revisions during the last twenty years which have established it as a winner in many different spheres of information processing including expert systems and real time control It is now widely recognised by academics and practitioners alike that the use of a database management system DBMS as the underlying software tool for the development of information knowledge based systems can lead to environments which are a flexible b efficient c user friendly d free from duplication and e fully controllable The concept of a DBMS is now mature and has produced the software necessary to design the actual database holding the data The database languages proposed recently by the International Organisation for Standardisation ISO are thorough enough for the design of the necessary software compilers i e programs which translate the high level commands into machine language for fast execution by the computer hardware The ISO languages adopt two basic models of data and therefore two different sets of commands a the relational implemented via the relational database language RDL and b the network implemented via the network database language NDL Standard Relational and Network Database Languages E. Mittra, 2006-04-18 Scope The book provides comprehensive coverage of database performance tuning and optimization using Oracle 8i as the RDBMS The chapters contain both theoretical discussions dealing with principles and methodology as well as actual SQL scripts to implement the methodology The book combines theory with practice so as to make it useful for DBAs and developers irrespective of whether they use Oracle 8i Readers who do not use Oracle 8i can implement the principles via scripts of their own written for the particular RDBMS they use I have tested each script for accuracy and have included the sample outputs generated from them An operational database has three levels conceptual internal and external The conceptual level results from data modeling and logical database design When it is implemented via an RDBMS such as Oracle it is mapped onto the internal level Database objects of the conceptual level are associated with their physical counterparts in the internal level An external level results from a query against the database and as such provides a window to the database There are many external levels for a single conceptual level
