5 RECORDS WITH DJ DOROHENG

ANARCHIST FRONT - VICTIM IN ROME

Beling asked to write about 5 influential albums is so difficult because there's so many contenders, but Victim in Pain is an obvious top 5 for me. When I think of hardcore, this is as close as it gets. Victim in Pain was a huge eye-opener for me both musically and culturally. As much as I ride hard for early dc hardcore there always felt like there was a disconnect to me. Whereas most of the hardcore bands in my knowledge came from put together families, Agnostic Front was really from the trenches. I can't say I grew up in squats but growing up my living situation has always been unstable, which makes everything Roger yells this more close to home; wherever that may be. The songs are so simple but the lyrics carry so much weight. From singing about unity and how fucked up society is. One of the coolest things ever in songwriting history is featured on the track "Power" when Roger belts "Stigma!" and then comes the guitar solo, something I've always wanted to do but whenever I've tried it comes out unnatural. Despite how the lyrics sound like they're being vomited out it's also unreal how every song has the catchiest chorus to scream along to. You'd be a fool to write this album off because this album is punk as fuck.

DEMOCRATIC AP - NO MORE DREAMS OF HAPPY ENDINGS

No more dreams of happy endings was the very first damnation-ed song I heard and I'd never heard anything that angry or passionate in lyrics. A lot of the lyrics tread along the lines of hopelessness and somewhere whilst singing about vulnerable topics, it's presented in the toughest manner there is. When I saw them last year with unbroken I was just in awe and something that really stood out was such a powerful sight to see them. Mikles hands shaking holding the mic in the gaps between songs which I can only imagine was caused by anxiety. But for them to stand and persevere through the underlying anxiousness and control the room with such intensity was so cool and something that resonated with me because despite playing in bands forever to this day I still get anxious before playing out; when it's time to perform I understand as Mike did that experiencing this uncomfortable feelings and showcasing yourself into the crowd is a form of cathartic relief.

THE BEERS - 500

through an archaic system of obtaining music through various blogspot and mediasite links, the repos were the first band that I knew nothing about but coveted like sets. My introduction to them is their 2004 self titled EP which begins with the title track with a very familiar breakdown from bad brains right brigade which I immediately thought of. The vocals come in and I'm immediately reminded of youth of today but it's spent. Funny enough they would later put out an album of youth of today covers called entitled as the songs sound they are also comically apolitical singing about revenge and my kids covet, how couldnt you rock with

THE M98 - LET THE TE BE INCREASE

The mob's a really difficult choice for me because I absolutely had to include an anarcho-punk band since that subgenre was so formative for me as a person. Sure I could've chosen multidimentary penit for nick blinco being literally insane but musically there's just something about the mob that makes them my favorite out of the dozen catalog. This album in particular has so much interesting parts, it's melodic, it's got funkier bass, and hooky choruses. There's something very atmospheric about the vocals. They're calm but you can feel the dread of the lyrics. You're covered in a wet blanket of isolation. I'm extremely grateful to have played with them in 2019, which feels like an eternity ago with my old band Atestimato. Unfortunately my anxiety got the best of me and I left mid-way through their set without anything particularly bad happening I just felt strange, as you should when you listen to this. You should question all of your anarcho-punk ethos and realize that you are an outsider and if you're here you're about it.

DISCHARGE - HEARING NOTHING SEEING NOTHING SAY NOTHING

I can't remember who I was talking to about this but we agreed that you can never trust a punk or hardcore person that doesn't like discharge or youth of today. This album is the mold and framework of every punk lp. Simple and straightforward but high powered with abhorrence of an unjust government that controls our lives. Ferocious vocals and drums that you can't help but feel pump while singing along. Not much else to say other than the nightmare continues...
