Interpreting the English Village Mick Aston, Christopher Gerrard, 2013-02-07 An original and approachable account of how archaeology can tell the story of the English village Shapwick lies in the middle of Somerset next to the important monastic centre of Glastonbury the abbey owned the manor for 800 years from the 8th to the 16th century and its abbots and officials had a great influence on the lives of the peasants who lived there It is possible that abbot Dunstan one of the great reformers of tenth century monasticism directed the planning of the village The Shapwick Project examined the development and history of an English parish and village over a ten thousand year period This was a truly multi disciplinary project Not only were a battery of archaeological and historical techniques explored such as field walking test pitting archaeological excavation aerial reconnaissance documentary research and cartographic analysis but numerous other techniques such as building analysis dendrochronological dating and soil analysis were undertaken on a large scale The result is a fascinating study about how the community lived and prospered in Shapwick In addition we learn how a group of enthusiastic and dedicated scholars unravelled this story As such there is much here to inspire and enthuse others who might want to embark on a landscape study of a parish or village area Seven of the ten chapters begin with a fictional vignette to bring the story of the village to life Text boxes elucidate re occurring themes and techniques Extensively illustrated in colour including 100 full page images

Medieval historians have for some time recognized the significance of personal naming processes and patterns for the illumination of social relations such as kinship and spiritual kinship or godparenthood Increasingly they are employing the investigation of personal naming anthroponymy as part of their elucidation of cultural change attempting through changes in patterns of personal naming to discern cultural transitions and transformations Recent coordinated research on the European continent has produced major collaborative discussion of the cultural implications of naming in France the Iberian peninsular and Italy The fruits of new research into the Germanic lands have also richly enhanced our understanding of cultural change there So it is predicated that a new trans European culture arose in the centuries about and after the year 1000 Omitted from this coordinated understanding of the arrival of a new European cultural tradition as it came to persist is the British archipelago We are however far from devoid of scholarly examination of the culture of personal naming in the British Isles An older generation of linguists produced a basic foundation although it has not remained free of some criticism Subsequently several scholars have independently advanced the interpretive analysis Clark Fellows Jensen Insley and McClure At one level then this book attempts a synthesis of that previous highly valuable but diffuse research to make it more widely known understood and accessible At another level nonetheless it engages with what has become a prevailing narrative of cultural change in England after the Norman Conquest the rapid transformation of English naming and culture through the assimilation of a new dominant extraneous influence By reinserting the detail and complexity it is hoped to demonstrate that far from a single uniform homologous culture there existed residual even resistant and regional cultures The account it is hoped presents a cohesive new narrative of the cultural implications of personal naming in England whilst also addressing important issues of gender politics and social organization Cartae Baronum Neil Stacy, 2019 A key point of reference for all political and social historians of twelfth century England Early in 1166 Henry II sent out orders via his sheriffs to all his tenants in chief instructing them to send him returns subsequently referred to as the cartae baronum that listed the number of knights enfeoffed upon their estates in 1135 when Henry I died the number of knights they had enfeoffed since 1135 how many knights were charged on their demesne and the names of their knightly tenants The returns submitted by his tenants in chief are therefore indispensable records for the nature of tenurial lordship as it operated under King Henry II The cartae were instrumental in their own day in confirming ligeance from rear tenants and providing up to date lists of honorial knights from whom the king might collect such feudal incidents wardships and reliefs as well as scutages and aids as fell during a period of royal custody They also laid the groundwork for a possible revision of knightly quotas owing to the crown Due to the sheer level of detail within the returns they are also a key source for those scholars who are interested in tracing the histories of individual honors and identifying comital baronial and knightly landholders in twelfth century England This important volume brings together all the extant cartae baronum for the first time In addition to these there are notices mostly from the early thirteenth century of those cartae which are now lost Each individual cartae here is accompanied by a detailed note that identifies the individual tenant in chief briefly discusses the history of his barony or holding and defines the nature of his obligations to the crown under Henry II The editor has also corrected a number of long established textual errors and identified as many subtenants as possible and located their toponyms NEIL STACY gained his DPhil from Oxford His publications include books on the estates of the abbeys of Glastonbury and Shaftesbury The Local Historian ,2002 Issues for autumn 1961 include the Standing Conference for Local History Bulletin People, Landscape and Alternative Agriculture Joan Thirsk,2004 Joan Thirsk is unquestionably the leading English agricultural historian of her generation In a writing career extending over half a century she has made an individual and influential contribution to rural history and our understanding of the economic history of early modern England As she enters her ninth decade and her sixth decade of writing and publication her capacity to lead her colleagues into new areas of research is undiminished This volume arises from a conference held in September 2002 to celebrate Joan s eightieth birthday It addresses a number of characteristic Thirsk preoccupations a concern for people and their lives with landscape region and peculiarity and a fascination with alternative agriculture The contributors are drawn from amongst Joan s former students and friends Southern History ,2003
