

2 The East End of Glasgow

The East End of Glasgow, where Mrs. McClelland lived, came just down its spine near the Royal Infirmary to its base beyond the city boundary. It can be divided into three areas, which might be called the Near East, the Middle East and the Far East.

The Near East is the Glasgow of the industrial revolution, when the massive housing needs of the population, swollen by refugees from the surrounding countryside, from the Highlands of Scotland and from Ireland, were met by the erection of street after street of grim tenements. These slums are giving way to new blocks of tall flats, but in 1967 many thousands of people still inhabited the crumbling tenements. The majority of these were buildings of four stories with three households to each floor, but sometimes there were two, sometimes four. Most of these houses consisted of a single room or a 'room and kitchen', although in some of the better tenements larger houses were to be found. In the older tenements there were no baths, no running hot water supply and no inside toilets. The toilets were to be found in a little alcove halfway down the staircase, and each served the needs of the two, three or four households on the landing. The stairs were usually straight, but the oldest buildings had a turner built out at the back containing a spiral staircase on which the toilets were located. The families living on the ground floor had the toilets on the same level, but ground floor accommodation was unpopular with the elderly, who feared burglars and the depredations of children.

The houses were approached through the typical Scottish 'close', which is a diversion, stone-lined passage, open at the front onto a street and at the back to the 'back court'—a muddy or stony courtyard behind the houses, where children played, clothes were dried and refuse was collected. The houses were damp and draughty and housed few amenities. In those which had never been modernised the

Survival Of The Unfittest A Study Of Geriatric Patients In Glasgow:

Survival of the Unfittest Bernard Isaacs, Maureen Livingstone, Yvonne Neville, 2021-10-12 Originally published in 1972 this book is an analytical account of the socio medical tribulations suffered by Glasgow's east end elderly leading to referral to geriatric wards. It examines why so many old people suffer from physical, mental and social deprivation in the final years of their lives. It shows by statistical studies and illustrative case histories that the basic cause is the survival into old age of people who are unfit to care for themselves in such numbers that help from families, neighbours, the social services and the NHS is insufficient. From this study the expression the geriatric giants or the four I's was coined: impairment of intellect, cerebral dysfunction, incontinence, immobility and instability falls. The term giant is seen to refer both to statistical frequency and to the huge personal burden of sufferers escalating the need for socio medical intervention. Prophetic in its predictions that the huge and complex social care problem would grow in the future, much of this book remains relevant today.

Survival of the Unfittest Bernard Isaacs, 1972 Geriatric Medicine: an evidence-based approach Frank Lally, Christine Roffe, 2014-10-02 People are living longer and the population over the age of 60 is burgeoning with repercussions for health services and healthcare expenditure in developed countries. Crucially, disease aetiology, diagnosis and treatment in older people differ from the general adult population. Older people often have complicated co-morbidities and respond to treatment in different ways compared to younger people. Evidence of efficacy of different treatments is often lacking because older people are under-represented in clinical trials and the specific needs of older people are rarely discussed specifically in more general texts. Geriatric medicine: an evidence-based approach is a clinical reference for health care professionals who manage older patients and summarizes up-to-date research literature in a style that can be directly applied by busy healthcare professionals and provide a useful resource for reference.

Dependency and Interdependency in Old Age Chris Phillipson, Miriam Bernard, Patricia Strang, 2024-05-10 Originally published in 1986 Dependency and Interdependency in Old Age presents papers from the British Society of Gerontology annual conference in 1985. The areas covered include the sociology of ageing, methodological issues, evaluations of service provision, ethnographies of growing old, historical studies and political perspectives on ageing. A creative dialogue between the proponents of these themes was urgently needed at the time and it was hoped that this volume would stimulate such a discussion.

Parkinson's Disease in the Older Patient Jeremy R. Playfer, John V. Hindle, 2008 This text represents a detailed guide to the holistic assessment and the management of older patients with Parkinson's disease based on current concepts in the management of chronic diseases and the caring strategies required in the four stages.

Meditations on Death David Jarrett, 2020-04-16 AS FEATURED ON BBC RADIO 4 Start the Week very moving, brilliant and profound. Brilliant, a grimly humorous yet humane account of the realities of growing old in the modern age. Henry Marsh. A remarkably likeable guide to a grisly subject, daunting yet ultimately life-affirming. Independent. What is a good death? How would you choose to live your last few months How do we best care for the rising tide of very elderly This unusual and important book is a series of reflections on death in all its forms the science of it the medicine the tragedy and the comedy Dr David Jarrett draws on family stories and case histories from his thirty years of treating the old demented and frail to try to find his own understanding of the end Profound provocative strangely funny and astonishingly compelling it is an impassioned plea that we start talking frankly and openly about death He writes about all the conversations that we our parents our children the medical community our government and society as a whole should be having And it is a call to arms for us to make radical changes to our perspective on the seventh age of man More praise for 33 Meditations on Death This book will stay with you Derren Brown Bursting with empathy common sense and humour Professor Dame Sue Black
