

The background of the slide is a detailed architectural drawing in a light blue color, overlaid on a darker blue background. The drawing shows a complex network of lines representing building structures, including walls, windows, and possibly stairs or ramps. The lines are thin and precise, typical of a technical drawing or blueprint. The overall effect is a professional and structured aesthetic.

Sustaining Nonprofit Performance:

Sustaining Nonprofit Performance Paul C. Light, 2004-08-31 The nonprofit sector survives because it has a self-exploiting work force wind it up and it will do more with less until it just runs out But at some point the spring must break America's nonprofit organizations face a difficult present and an uncertain future Money is tight Workloads are heavy employee turnover is high and charitable donations have not fully rebounded from the recent economic downturn Media and political scrutiny remains high and public confidence in nonprofits has yet to recover from its sharp decline in the wake of well-publicized scandals In a recent survey only 14 percent of respondents believed that nonprofits did a very good job of spending money wisely nearly half said that nonprofit leaders were paid too much compared to 8 percent who said they earned too little Yet the nonprofit sector has never played a more important role in American life As a generation of nonprofit executives and board members approaches retirement it becomes increasingly important to ensure that their organizations are prepared to continue their missions that they are built to last in a supremely challenging environment Paul Light renowned expert on public service and nonprofit management strongly argues for capacity building measures as a way to sustain and improve the efforts of the nonprofit sector With innovative data and insightful analysis he demonstrates how nonprofits that invest in technology training and strategic planning can successfully advance their goals and restore public faith in their mission and capabilities He explains the ways in which restoration of that faith is critical to the survival of nonprofits another important reason for improving and then sustaining performance Organizations that invest adequately in their infrastructure and long term planning are the ones that will survive and continue to serve Sustaining Nonprofit Performance Paul Charles Light, 2004 Sustaining Nonprofit Performance Paul Charles Light, 2004 America's nonprofit organizations are facing an uncertain future Many are operating with leaner budgets and face a wave of budget cuts as the federal deficit grows At the same time public confidence in nonprofits is at a contemporary low Congress seems poised to enact new and stringent rules for nonprofit spending Many state attorneys general find nonprofits a prime target for criminal investigations The media continue to uncover troubling examples of excess and charitable giving has yet to respond to the economic recovery To address this crisis Paul Light one of the nation's leading experts on nonprofits and public services argues nonprofits must embrace capacity building measures Using innovative data collection and analysis he demonstrates how nonprofits that invest in technology training and strategic planning can successfully advance their goals

Performance Measurement for Sustainable Development Laszlo Pinter, Peter Hardi, Lisa McRorie-Harvey, International Institute for Sustainable Development, 1995 A new field of integrated performance measurement is rapidly evolving in which sustainability is defined in terms of contextually relevant economic environmental and social indicators There is a corresponding international momentum for progress on sustainability related performance measurement with a requirement for the development of methodologies and indicator sets that are comparable across various scales and sectors This
