Structural Holes:

Structural Holes Ronald S. Burt, 2009-06-30 Ronald Burt describes the social structural theory of competition that has developed through the last two decades. The contrast between perfect competition and monopoly is replaced with a network model of competition. The basic element in this account is the structural hole a gap between two individuals with complementary resources or information. When the two are connected through a third individual as entrepreneur the gap is filled creating important advantages for the entrepreneur. Competitive advantage is a matter of access to structural holes in relation to market transactions.

The major emphasis is on fatigue and failure behavior using engineering models that have been developed to predict in advance of service acceptable fatigue and other durability related lifetimes. The book covers broad classes of materials used for high performance structural applications such as aerospace components automobiles and power generation systems.

Perceived Structural Holes and Power in Organizations Zhi Li, 2019 Combining Burts research on structural holes and others notion of cognitive networks I propose the concept of perceived structural holes. I assert that peoples perception of a persons structural holes is a source of power in organizations and different versions of structural holes egos actual structural holes egos self perceived structural holes and observers perception of egos structural holes imply different theoretical mechanisms. To explore this claim the data collected in a small firm are studied. The results show that 1 Egos self perceived structural holes are larger than observers perception of egos structural holes 2 Egos actual structural holes are positively related to egos self perceived structural holes and observers perception of egos structural holes 3 Egos actual structural holes are positively related to egos reputational power in the friendship networks but not in the advice networks and the positive effect in the friendship networks is partly explained by observers perception of egos structural holes 4 It is observers perception of egos structural holes rather than egos self perceived structural holes that influences reputational power Later research should pay more attention to how people not only egos but also observers strategically represent and perceive structural holes and other network characteristics to gain power
