Surviving Poverty In Medieval Paris:

Surviving Poverty in Medieval Paris Sharon A. Farmer, 2005 Farmer extends and deepens the understanding of urban poverty in the high middle ages She explores the ways in which cultural elites thought about the poor and shows that their conceptions of poor men and women were derived from the roles assigned to men and women in the opening chapters of the Book of Genesis men are associated with productive labour of labour within the public realm and women with reproductive labour or labour within the private realm

Experiences of Poverty in Late Medieval and Early Modern England and France Anne M. Scott, 2016-04-15 Exploring a range of poverty experiences socioeconomic moral and spiritual this collection presents new research by a distinguished group of scholars working in the medieval and early modern periods Collectively they explore both the assumptions and strategies of those in authority dealing with poverty and the ways in which the poor themselves tried to contribute to exploit avoid or challenge the systems for dealing with their situation The studies demonstrate that poverty was by no means a simple phenomenon It varied according to gender age and geographical location and the way it was depicted in speech writing and visual images could as much affect how the poor experienced their poverty as how others saw and judged them Using new sources and adopting new approaches to known sources the authors share insights into the management and the self management of the poor and search out aspects of the experience of poverty worthy of note from which can be traced lasting influences on the continuing understanding and experience of poverty in pre modern Europe

Poverty and Prosperity in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance Cynthia Kosso, Anne Scott, 2012 The dichotomous topics poverty and prosperity rich and poor continue to interest scholars politicians and philosophers while also appealing to a wide general audience and are particularly of interest today In this volume the authors raise and try to answer questions about the ways in which individuals families ethnic and religious groups and nations 500 1000 or even 1500 years ago approached the idea of economic status and personal worth The interdisciplinary nature of this volume provides an analysis of poverty and prosperity from a multitude of perspectives and within a host of secular and religious literature historical treatises scholastic works art travellers and political accounts Through its breadth depth and interdisciplinary focus the present volume makes a full contribution to the topic for anyone interested in how people in the past have experienced these states Studies in Mediaeval Halakhah in Honor of Stephen M. Passamanek Alyssa M. Gray, Bernard S. Jackson, 2007

Women and Economic Activities in Fourteenth-century Ghent Shennan Lee Hutton, 2006 In late medieval Ghent the second largest city in northern Europe unwritten customary law and cultural practices allowed women a much wider scope of economic enterprise than in many other areas of medieval Europe Gender and work in medieval Flemish cities has been neglected despite the fact that practices in Ghent have implications for urban centers throughout the Low Countries France and Germany Sources of actual practice the contracts preserved in the annual registers of the aldermen who ruled the city show that women were principals in sales of property management of investments and moneylending without male representation in one quarter of the legal acts recorded from 1339 through 1361 These findings call into question received notions that the legal incapability of married women limited and interrupted their economic lives In Ghent marital status did not determine women's economic lives which were relatively continuous and shaped more by their own choices The unwritten body of oral custom administered by the aldermen allowed some married women as well as single women and widows legal capability because they owned immovable property in their own names Women claimed that right by publicly performing the management of their property before the aldermen Most men accepted women's economic activities as necessary and beneficial to the family and household and their support was crucial but not uncontested There was a competing patrimonial system originating in rural landholding practices and noble culture which aimed at reserving management of property for men and eventually undermined the customary access of women to the economy This dissertation analyzes the activities of women in the property markets moneylending and credit and craft production and distribution Women were often buyers and sellers in the urban property market and especially in the annuities markets but they almost never invested in rural land There were many women producers and marketsellers who owned and operated their own businesses Women were significant moneylenders for both small amounts and large loans which circulated their wealth through the commercial economy and made it available for capital formation

The Journal of Medieval and Early Modern Studies, 2003 Sexuality and Culture in Medieval and Renaissance Europe Philip M. Soergel, 2005 Religious and Laity in Western Europe, 1000-1400 Emilia Jamroziak, Janet E. Burton, 2006 This volume examines forms of interaction between monastic or mendicant communities and lay people in the high Middle Ages in Britain France the Low Countries and Scandinavia The nineteen papers explore these issues in geographically and chronologically diverse settings in a way that no English language collection has yet attempted. It brings together the latest research from established as well as younger historians. The first section, Patrons and Benefactors, power, fashion and mutual expectations, examines lay involvement in foundations, the rights held by patrons and how they used these powers as well as networks of relationships with broader groups of benefactors. The authors demonstrate how changing fashions shaped the fortunes of particular orders and houses and explore how power relations between different types of patrons and benefactors, royal figures, kinship and other social groupings affected the mutual expectations of the various parties. The second section of the volume, entitled Lay and Religious, negotiation, influence and utility, shows how lay people's ideas of the role of religious houses could impact upon their patronage of and support for monastic or mendicant institutions. Conversely, religious communities offered multi-faceted benefits, practical, intellectual or spiritual, for the secular world. The book concludes by focusing on the rapid growth of confraternities, their relation to their urban mendicant and monastic contexts and how the role and forms of confraternities evolved in the late medieval period.
