contemporary urbanization and the interactions between cities and the environment. The volume is contextualized against latest theories debates and discussions on sustainable urbanization the post 2015 development agenda of the United Nations and India's official launching of the smart city agenda. Reflecting on three major components of urban sustainability investments and infrastructures waste management and urban ecologies and environmentalisms it moves beyond the bi centric approach of only looking into the differences between the developed and the developing world and reflects on cities across India using polycentric methods and approaches. The Indian urban scenario is extremely complex and diverse and solutions laid out in official and non official documents tend to miss these complexities. This volume includes innovative research across different parts of India identifying city specific sources of unsustainability and challenges along with strategies and potentials that would make the process of urban transition both sustainable and equitable. Complex explorations of non linear bottom up multisectoral process based local urban contexts across north south east and west Indian cities in this volume critique a general acceptance of the universalized concept of sustainable urbanization and suggest ways that might be important for transcending inclusive theories to form practical policy based recommendations and actions.

Sustainable Cities
Hidenori Tamagawa, 2006 Developing countries are rapidly urbanizing and most of the world's population will soon be living in cities making it crucial to examine how cities can be developed on a sustainable basis. Japan is one of the most urbanized countries in the world and offers a remarkable series of lessons for sustainable urban planning. This book draws together experts from engineering humanities social sciences and mental health to introduce Japanese experiences and compare them with international research. Rapid urbanization has damaged natural and human systems in Japan and many planners are seizing upon new technologies and scientific methods as opportunities to restructure cities. However others are focusing on the well being of citizens and seeking to make urban society more sustainable. This book examines the tensions between sociological and technological approaches and the dichotomy between planning professionals and civil society
