The History And Archaeology Of Ports:

The History and Archaeology of Ports Gordon Jackson,1983 American Journal of Archaeology and of the History of the Fine Arts ,1894 Harbours and Havens Gordon Jackson,International Maritime Economic History Association,1999

This book is a collection of ten essays concerning various aspects of ports port towns and port history by means of tribute to the maritime historian Gordon Jackson The volumes begins with an appreciation of Gordon Jackson s career and concludes with a bibliography of his published work The first four essays concern British ports Hull Liverpool and Dumfries in particular and the remaining six concern international ports a wide range stretching across the ports of Fremantle Yokohama Dubai and Bremen The essays cover topics such as politics and port management port development throughout history post war port development individual case studies the construction of artificial ports and port policies Proceedings - Dorset Natural History and Archaeological Society Dorset Natural History and Archaeological Society,1892 List of members in each volume The American Journal of Archaeology and of the History of the Fine Arts ,1888 Historical Archaeology ,2004 Historical Britain Eric Stuart Wood,1997 This book examines the origins evolution and progress of Britain s villages towns landscape climate and geology farming methods industries parks gardens and churches A bibliography of archaeology and antiquities. Being the sections relating to those subjects in The best books and The reader's guide William Swan Sonnenschein,William Swan Stallybrass,1897 The Historical Development of the Port of Faversham 1580-1780 Paul Wilkinson,2006 This work is the first comprehensive historical and archaeological investigation into the maritime organization of the port of Faversham Kent SE England The period examined is 1580 1780 Faversham a multi functional town was well placed to take advantage of its maritime position in the Swale its closeness to Canterbury and the need to ship grain to London from this fertile crescent of North Kent An examination of the original and early development of the port is complemented by an analysis of the ships and port administration Unique methods of ship operation and manning are investigated and a comprehensive survey of the shipping fleets of Kent during their formative years undertaken This study is also concerned with analyzing the variety of mercantile responses to marketing opportunities Apart from providing London with ever increasing agricultural cargoes and return cargoes of manufactured goods Faversham developed a very healthy trade in wool oysters fishing and the manufacture of gunpowder This movement of commodities is investigated and the inter play between changes in production patterns assessed while the significance of the maritime development of the port provides ample scope for pioneering a study of port logistics and organization An examination of the origins and early developments of Faversham s maritime industry is long overdue and the uncovering of new evidence makes it possible to unravel the complexities of this mercantile activity during Faversham s formative years

Ports of Trade, Al Mina and Geometric Greek Pottery in the Levant Joanna Luke,2003 The site of Al Mina on the Levantine coast has been characterised in many different ways but in this study Joanna Luke reveals its true identity as a thriving port of trade. She focuses in particular on the finds of Greek Geometric pottery found at the site, evidence which in the past has been used to suggest Al Mina was a Greek colony. Annual Report - Marine Biological Station, University of Liverpool, Port Erin, Isle of Man Marine Biological Station at Port Erin, Isle of Man, 1898 Annual Archaeological Report, 1897 Archaeological Report, 1897 Archaeology with Ethnography Betty Meehan, Rhys M.
