The Battlegrounds Of Bioscience:

The Battlegrounds of Bio-Science Frank Miele, 2002 Overcoming loneliness becomes a reality when the root cause is revealed and dealt with openly Within the pages of this book Defeating Loneliness readers will discover not only the root causes of loneliness but they will be introduced to strategies designed to extricate them from their plight It is the confident hope of this author that Defeating Loneliness will be a catalyst to emotional and spiritual health by providing readers with tangible solutions to their feelings of emptiness and desperation inspiring them to pursue a path to victorious living Dr Peter H Burgess Historical Studies in the Physical and Biological Sciences, 2002 The Battlegrounds of Bio-Science Frank Miele, 2002-11 Where the Wild Things Were William Stolzenburg, 2011-01-15 For years predators like snow leopards and white tipped sharks have been disappearing from the top of the food chain largely as a result of human action Science journalist Will Stolzenburg reveals why and how their absence upsets the delicate balance of the world's environment

Hermeneutics of Human-Animal Relations in the Wake of Rewilding Mateusz Tokarski, 2019-05-21 In consequence of significant social political economic and demographic changes several wildlife species are currently growing in numbers and recolonizing Europe While this is rightly hailed as a success of the environmental movement the return of wildlife brings its own issues As the animals arrive in the places we inhabit we are learning anew that life with wild nature is not easy especially when the accumulated cultural knowledge and experience pertaining to such coexistence have been all but lost This book provides a hermeneutic study of the ways we come to understand the troubling impacts of wildlife by exploring and critically discussing the meanings of ecological discomforts Thus it begins the work of rebuilding the culture of coexistence The cases presented in this book range from crocodile attacks to mice infestations and their analysis consequently builds up an ethics that sees wildlife as active participants in the shaping of human moral and existential reality This book is of interest not only to environmental philosophers who will find here an original contribution to the established ethical discussions but also to wildlife managers and even to those members of the public who themselves struggle to make sense of encounters with their new wild neighbors Review of the Literature on the Links Between Biodiversity and Climate Change, 2009

History of Science: History of biology Rajbir Singh,1994 Landscape-scale Conservation Planning Stephen C. Trombulak,Robert Baldwin,2010-09-21 Hugh P Possingham Landscape scale conservation planning is coming of age In the last couple of decades conservation practitioners working at all levels of governance and all spatial scales have embraced the CARE principles of conservation planning Comprehensiveness Adequacy Representativeness and Efficiency Hundreds of papers have been written on this theme and several different kinds of software program have been developed and used around the world making conservation planning based on these principles global in its reach and influence Does this mean that all the science of conservation planning is over that the discovery phase has been replaced by an engineering phase as we move from defining the rules to implementing them in the landscape This book and the continuing growth in the literature suggest that the answer to this question is most definitely no All of applied conservation can be wrapped up into a single sentence what should be done the action in what place at what time using what mechanism and for what outcome the objective It all seems pretty simple what where when how and why However stating a problem does not mean it is easy to solve

Slow Wood Brian Donahue, 2024-11-26 A radical proposal for healing the relationship between humans and forests through responsible sustainable use of local and regional wood in home building American homes are typically made of lumber and plywood delivered by a global system of ruthless extraction or of concrete and steel which are even worse for the planet Wood is often the most sustainable material for building but we need to protect diverse forests as much as we desperately need more houses Brian Donahue addresses this modern conundrum by documenting his experiences building a timber frame home from the wood growing on his family farm practicing worst first forestry Through the stories of the trees he used sugar maple black cherry black birch and hemlock and some he didn't white pine and red oak the book also explores the history of Americans relationship with their forests Donahue provides a new interpretation of the connection between American houses and local woodlands He delves into how this bond was broken by the rise of a market economy of industrial resource extraction and addresses the challenge of restoring a more enduring relationship Ultimately this book provides a blueprint and a stewardship plan for how to live more responsibly with the woods offering a sustainable approach to both forestry and building centered on tightly connected ecological and social values
