The Changing Carbon Cycle John R. Trabalka, David E. Reichle, 2013-03-09 The United States Government cognizant of its responsibilities to future generations has been sponsoring research for nine years into the causes effects and potential impacts of increased concentrations of carbon dioxide CO<sub>2</sub> in the atmosphere Agencies such as the National Science Foundation National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the U S Department of Energy DOE cooperatively spent about 100 million from FY 1978 through FY 1984 directly on the study of CO<sub>2</sub> The DOE as the 2 lead government agency for coordinating the government s research efforts has been responsible for about 60% of these research efforts William James succinctly defined our purpose when he stated science must be based upon irreducible and stubborn facts Scientific knowledge can and will reduce the present significant uncertainty surrounding our understanding of the causes effects and potential impacts of increasing atmospheric CO<sub>2</sub> We have come far during the past seven years in resolving some underlying doubts and in narrowing the ranges of disagreement Basic concepts have become less murky Yet much more must be accomplished more irreducible and stubborn facts are needed to reduce the uncertainties so that we can improve our knowledge base Uncertainty can never be reduced to zero However with a much improved knowledge base we will be able to learn understand and be in a position to make decisions The Changing Carbon Cycle John R. Krapivin, Costas Varotsos, 2003-09-24 Professor Kondratyev and his team consider the concept of global warming due to the greenhouse effect and put forward a new approach to the problem of assessing the impact of anthropogenic processes Considering data on both sources and sinks for atmospheric carbon and various conceptual schemes of the global carbon dioxide cycle they suggest a new approach to studies of the problem of the greenhouse effect They assess the role of different types of soil and vegetation in the assimilation of carbon dioxide from the atmosphere and discuss models of the atmosphere ocean gas exchange and its role in the carbon dioxide cycle paying special attention to the role of the Arctic Basin The authors also consider models of other global atmospheric cycles for a range of atmospheric constituents and conclude by drawing together a range of scenarios on modelling the global carbon cycle      Human Interactions with the Carbon Cycle National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on the Human Dimensions of Global Change, Paul C. Stern, 2002-04-29 The USGCRP's Carbon Cycle Working Group asked the National Research Council's Committee on the Human Dimensions of Global Change to hold a workshop on Human Interactions with the Carbon Cycle The basic purpose of the workshop was to help build bridges between the research communities in the social sciences and the natural sciences that might eventually work together to produce the needed understanding of the carbon cycle an understanding that can inform public decisions that could among other things prevent disasters from resulting from the ways humanity has been altering the carbon cycle Members of the working group hoped that a successful workshop would improve communication between the relevant research communities in the natural and social sciences leading eventually to an expansion of the carbon cycle program element in directions that would better integrate the two domains      Climate Change Water Network (Waterloo, Ont.), 1990 Proceedings of a workshop whose objectives were to present and discuss results of recent climate change experiments undertaken in Canada to evaluate a variety of climate models and impact analyses and to develop methods and strategies for future studies to establish working linkages between modelers and analysts in the fields of climate hydrology and ecosystem research      The Global Carbon Cycle Christopher B. Field, Michael R. Raupach, 2012-09-26 While a number of gases are implicated in global warming carbon dioxide is the most important contributor and in one sense the entire phenomena can be seen as a human induced perturbation of the carbon cycle The Global Carbon Cycle offers a scientific assessment of the state of current knowledge of the carbon cycle by the world's leading scientists sponsored by SCOPE and the Global Carbon Project and other international partners It gives an introductory over view of the carbon cycle with multidisciplinary contributions covering biological physical and social science aspects Included are 29 chapters covering topics including an assessment of carbon climate human interactions a portfolio of carbon management options spatial and temporal distribution of sources and sinks of carbon dioxide socio economic driving forces of emissions scenarios Throughout contributors emphasize that all parts of the carbon cycle are interrelated and only by developing a framework that considers the full set of feedbacks will we be able to achieve a thorough understanding and develop effective management strategies The Global Carbon Cycle edited by Christopher B Field and Michael R Raupach is part of the Rapid Assessment Publication series produced by the Scientific Committee on Problems of the Environment SCOPE in an effort to quickly disseminate the collective knowledge of the world's leading experts on topics of pressing environmental concern      Ecology, 1998      気候変動と生態系 (Japan), 1990      The Ice Chronicles Paul A.
