Or Five Months Before the Mast on a Modern Steam Cargo-boat Harry Vandervell,1898 Two shoes The Cat

Empire, 2011 Two Shoes the second studio album from Melbourne Australia's Cat Empire was cut at the legendary Egrem Studio in Havana Cuba the site of landmark recordings by the Buena Vista Social Club and countless other Cuban artists in just under a month in late 2004 Like their self titled studio debut Two Shoes was a massive success in the sextet's homeland debuting at number one and its word of mouth stoked an already expanding fan base in Europe and North America enough of one to nab the band a booking at Tennessee's prestigious Bonnaroo music festival in 2006 despite the lack of an American release The fuss was justified the Cat Empire is a wholly engaging genre splicing band that exudes equal parts musical intelligence and no frills party down exuberance The Cuban influence is never far from the surface on Two Shoes but neither is it the point of the Havana excursion Primarily the Latin brass blasts and percussion serve to accent rather than define the direction and the well crafted jazz piano runs that light up tracks such as Sol y Sombra come not from one of the Cuban guest musicians but from one of the band's founders Oliver McGill All of this talk of jazz and Cuba should not leave the impression that Two Shoes is an overly serious record however While a considerable percentage of the material provided primarily by another co founder vocalist percussionist Felix Riebl as well as trumpeter Harry James Angus ponders lofty thematic issues much of it is whimsical this is after all a group proud to include the lyric Some nights I go to bed there's a ghost in the air above my head and I tremble Sometimes I eat KFC other times I give up meat and I just eat lentils into a song Protons Neutrons Electrons Skipping merrily from alt rock crunch to hip hop beats landing on reggae ska Latin jazz and points in between Two Shoes is clever and brainy danceable and absorbing As for the Special Edition part of the title that's where things get a little confusing From the looks of it a couple of tracks from the original Aussie release were dropped from this Canadian edition but six tracks from the debut album were appended to it The entire second disc is a DVD consisting of a live show love the French language cover of the Eagles Hotel California and four music videos Jeff Tamarkin AMG
