

A young man with short red hair, wearing a brown tunic and trousers, stands on a rocky, mossy cliff. He is looking out over a vast, colorful landscape that appears to be a mix of water and land, with swirling white energy or smoke in the foreground. The sky is a dramatic mix of orange, red, and purple, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. In the background, there are dark, jagged rock formations and a large, white, feather-like object floating in the air. The overall scene is one of a journey or a quest.

The Beginning The End:

Granting the Seasons Nathan Sivin, 2008-12-19 China's most sophisticated system of computational astronomy was created for a Mongol emperor who could neither read nor write Chinese to celebrate victory over China after forty years of devastating war. This book explains how and why and reconstructs the observatory and the science that made it possible. For two thousand years a fundamental ritual of government was the emperor's granting the seasons to his people at the New Year by issuing an almanac containing an accurate lunisolar calendar. The high point of this tradition was the Season granting system. Shou shih li 1280. Its treatise records detailed instructions for computing eclipses of the sun and moon and motions of the planets based on a rich archive of observations, some ancient and some new. Sivin, the West's leading scholar of the Chinese sciences, not only recreates the project's cultural, political, bureaucratic, and personal dimensions but translates the extensive treatise and explains every procedure in minimally technical language. The book contains many tables, illustrations, and aids to reference. It is clearly written for anyone who wants to understand the fundamental role of science in Chinese history. There is no comparable study of state science in any other early civilization. RBI Grade B Officer Exam
