Cornell and the Transatlantic Avant-Garde Analisa Leppanen-Guerra, 2017-07-05 Focusing on his evocative and profound references to children and their stories Children's Stories and Child Time in the Works of Joseph Cornell and the Transatlantic Avant Garde studies the relationship between the artist's work on childhood and his search for a transfigured concept of time This study also situates Cornell and his art in the broader context of the transatlantic avant garde of the 1930s and 40s Analisa Leppanen Guerra explores the children's stories that Cornell perceived as fundamental in order to unpack the dense network of associations in his under studied multimedia works Moving away from the usual focus on his box constructions the author directs her attention to Cornell's film and theater scenarios explorations dossiers and book objects One highlight of this study is a work that may well be the first artist's book of its kind and has only been exhibited twice Untitled Journal d'Agriculture Pratique presented as Cornell's enigmatic tribute to Lewis Carroll's Alice books

1916 edition Excerpt MAKING THE BEST OF IT What a dreary day this is said the old gray goose to the brown hen They stood at the henhouse window and watched the falling snow It covered every nook and corner of the farmyard Yes indeed said the brown hen I would be almost willing to be made into chicken pie on such a day She had scarcely stopped talking when the Pekin duck said fretfully I am dreadfully hungry Then a little flock of speckled chickens all huddled together peeped And we are so thirsty In fact the feathered folks in the henhouse were cross and discontented Since the farmer's boy had fed them early in the morning they had been given nothing to eat or drink Hour after hour went by The cold winter wind howled around their house It is no wonder that they felt deserted The handsome white rooster though seemed quite as happy as usual That is saying a great deal for a jollier betternatured old fellow than he never lived in a farmyard Sunshine rain or snow were all the same to him He crowed quite as lustily in stormy as in fair weather Well he said as his bright eyes glanced about the henhouse you all seem to be having a fit of the dumps Nobody answered the white rooster but a faint cluck or two came from some hens At once they put their heads back under their wings as if ashamed of having spoken at all This was quite too much for the white rooster He stood first on one yellow foot and then on the other He turned his head from side to side and said Well we are a lively set Any one would think to look in here that we were surrounded by a band of hungry foxes Just then a daring little bantam rooster hopped down from his perch He strutted over to the big rooster and said We are all lively
