Technological Change and Rural Development in Poor Countries Kartik Chandra Roy, Cal Clark, 1994 Rural development is a subject that appears to be plagued by a central paradox development is necessary to alleviate rural poverty but while new technology has raised agricultural output it has also increased the suffering of millions of poor landless families in many Third World countries The rural poor especially women have been marginalized urban migrants have become desperate unemployed squatters not well paid industrial workers and environmental degradation has proved severe The authors argue that many development programmes go awry because the authorities neglect essential development issues Development must be defined in terms of the provision of basic human needs which include life expectancy infant mortality and literacy indicators which reflect the quality of life of the bulk of the population not just a narrow elite What they suggest is that the issues neglected by the conventional approach must be addressed if true development is to occur Technological

Empowerment in the Global Economy Kartik Chandra Roy, Hans-Christer Blomqvist, Cal Clark, 2008 Since women account for almost 50 percent of the world's population the sustainability of development of the global economy can be greatly impaired if the state authorities in individual countries pay less attention to the improvement in the socio economic status of women relative to men Improvement in socio economic status which facilitates empowerment of individuals is greatly dependent on conducive informal institutions and state institutions This book is the first of its kind to critically examine the role of these institutions in women's empowerment in five continents in the world The analysis of the role of institutions in individual countries is underpinned by a robust theoretical background presented in the first three chapters The chapters on individual countries also include a section dealing with recommendations for changes in state policies affecting women's empowerment

Economic Development and Women in the World Community Hans C. Blomqvist, Kartik Roy, Clement A. Tisdell, 1996-02-16 After reviewing theories about how women are likely to fare as a result of economic development the editors and their contributors focus on the socioeconomic status of women and changes in it as a result of processes of economic development in individual countries in five continents Economic development is supposed to remove impediments to the improvement in women s status In some developing countries researchers have found that instead of lessening the forces of restrictions economic development may in fact have strengthened them The editors call for a greater involvement of women as active participants in the process of dismantling social legal and institutional barriers to women s development

Institutions, Globalisation and Empowerment K. C. Roy,Jörn Sideras,2006-01-01 Examining aspects of social and economic institutions and exploring their operation as a result of globalisation this book approaches the issue of globalisation from a perspective of how the forces of globalisation are transforming domestic social and economic institutions to create greater opportunities for empowerment in individual countries

Gender and Technology Caroline Sweetman,1998 This collection of articles from Gender and Development considers technologies of many kinds including those intended to save womens labour to enable them to control their fertility and to learn and communicate using computer technology

Solar Damian Miller,2012-05-04 To solve the climate crisis the world must make a wholesale shift to renewable energy technologies With surging growth in emerging markets this transformation takes on even greater urgency The challenges and opportunities are immense Selling Solar considers how such a shift might happen Focusing on the case of solar photovoltaics it shows how at the start of the 21st century this promising technology began to diffuse rapidly in select emerging markets after years of struggling to take off What were the initial barriers to diffusion How were they overcome Who did it And how can this success be replicated Drawing on literature on innovation diffusion and entrepreneurship the author answers these questions showing how entrepreneurs affected profound technological change not just through the solar systems they sold but through the example they set to both new market entrants and policymakers In analysing how this happened this book offers important lessons for the diffusion of a range of renewable energy technologies in emerging markets and for the advancement of the sector as a whole Selling Solar is essential reading for anyone who believes in a renewable energy future and wants it sooner rather than later

Africa Kathleen M. Baker,2000 The success of rural development schemes in Africa particularly those involving land is heavily dependent on understanding the local ecology Any farmer knows this yet rarely has development project design catered adequately for the vicissitudes of the African environment Although environmental unpredictability was recognized in the temperate zone by the mid nineteenth century the ecological theory which was subsequently developed and most widely accepted was based on concepts of norms and equilibria History has shown that the application of such ecological assumptions to African environments is wholly inappropriate This book argues that many methods used by West African smallholder farmers and pastoralists are properly adapted to the region s unpredictable physical environment Field examples from the semi arid and humid zones demonstrate the nature of environmental variability and the skill of indigenous farmers and pastoralists in exploiting this It is thus argued that development planners should where possible model development schemes on the more successful ecologically sound methods of indigenous land management Beyond Liberalisation
