

The background of the book cover is a detailed, painterly illustration of a cityscape. In the foreground, a dense cluster of buildings with red-tiled roofs is visible. A river or canal flows through the middle ground, reflecting the sky. In the background, a large, prominent dome, likely a cathedral or church, rises above the city. The sky is filled with soft, white clouds. The overall style is reminiscent of 19th-century architectural illustrations.

Excerpt from The Design of Residential Areas Basic Considerations Principles and Methods F all things that contribute to the welfare Of society none is more important than the good quality Of the homes in which people live This does not mean that welfare depends solely on houses being strong enough to provide shelter against the elements but also that they shall be agreeable enough in their environment to give reasonable satisfaction to other human wants The design of homes together with their location approaches and surroundings in well arranged groups and neighborhoods is one of the most important branches of the art Of city planning What are the basic considerations underlying this art that apply to residential areas What are the principles involved in its application And what are the methods we Should employ so as to Obtain the highest degree of health comfort convenience and beauty consistent with true economy These are questions which I shall endeavor to answer in the following pages The difficulties Of discovering answers are the very reasons for making this investigation assigned to me by the Harvard School Of City Planning True it covers ground which has already been tilled and harrowed but which needs much more cultivation in two directions In the first place the root causes of the weedy growth that commonly spoils the urban scene have not been fully unearthed We need to plow deeper if we are to bring them to the surface In the second place the absence of any sure guidance in matters of principle and methods of design with specific reference to residential areas makes it desirable to try to see whether some such sure and definite guidance cannot be given About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Housing the North American City Michael Doucet, John C. Weaver, 1991-08-06 Doucet and Weaver begin this empirical analytical and narrative study with an analysis of the evolution of land development as an enterprise and continue with an examination of house design and construction practices the development of the apartment building and an account of class and age as they relate to housing tenure They also relate developments in Hamilton to the current state of urban historiography using their case study to resolve discrepancies and contradictions in the literature Among the major themes the authors deal with is a controversial exploration of what they see as a central North American urge the desire to own a home Other themes include the social allocation of urban space the quality and affordability of housing the increased interest of large corporations in the land development and financial service industries and a comparative analysis of housing in Canada and the United States The authors have drawn on civic and business records dating from the early nineteenth century to the latest planning data Combining this information with their comprehensive analysis Doucet and Weaver show that current housing problems and potential solutions are better understood when seen as part of a historical process They provide a critical assessment of the ways in which contemporary society produces shelter and question the use of technical innovations alone to resolve housing crises      Unit Guides for the Study of Housing and Civic Beautification Cleveland (Ohio).
