Abstract

This paper examines the intergenerational justice theory of obligations to future generations. I refer to queer temporality theory and evaluate its radical questioning. However, I argue that its destructive conclusions need not be accepted. Proper division of the time span according to the nature of the problem is important for reaching a moderate conclusion.

1. Introduction: Do We Need the Future?

Do we need to produce and nurture the next generation? Perhaps we do not. If so, how does this change the debate on our normative relationships with future generations? With this question in mind, this paper examines the theory of intergenerational justice in relation to future generations yet to be born.

The basic question of intergenerational justice is: What kind of justice relationship can we, the present generation, have with future generations that have not yet come into existence (and sometimes with past generations that no longer exist)? Since the 1960s, when global environmental problems began to be called more pressing, this question has been actively debated because of its increasing practical importance. However, intergenerational justice theory, which questions the diachronic normative relationship with people who do not yet exist, is not merely an applied issue, but has a distinctive philosophical significance that is not limited to the diachronic normative relationship. It poses a serious challenge to the theories of practical philosophy, which are said to have been "revived" since the 1970s. This paper will examine some of these works, but what

The Divided Future:

The Divide Robert Charles Wilson, 2013-03-29 He was designed to be the perfect man And at first the experiment seemed a success John Shaw the product of secret government research into enhanced intelligence was from birth far beyond anything human Brilliant and charismatic John could have been anything he wanted except that which he longed for more than anything To be normal So John created Benjamin an alternative persona a way of coping with people who hated what they could not understand He was everything that John wasn't but now those very differences are killing him Benjamin has become the dominant personality more and more often in control John's altered body has left his mind at risk and unless he can discover the truth that will fuse both parts together both he and Benjamin will die Robert Charles Wilson spins one of his most stirring tightly woven tales with The Divide Reminiscent of Flowers for Algernon it is at once an adventure story and a sensitive look at the consequences of man's actions and of one man's quite literal search for himself Encyclopædia

Commentators on Aristotle Richard D. McKirahan, 2021-12-16 An astounding project of analysis on more than one hundred translations of ancient philosophical texts this index of words found in the Ancient Commentators on Aristotle series comprises some 114 000 entries It forms in effect a unique dictionary of philosophical terms from the post Hellenistic period through to late antiquity and will be an essential reference tool for any scholar working on the meaning of these ancient texts As traditional dictionaries have usually neglected to include translation examples from philosophical texts of this period scholars interested in how meanings of words vary across time and author have been ill served This index fills a huge gap therefore in the lexical analysis of ancient Greek and has application well beyond the reading of ancient philosophical commentaries Bringing together the full indexes from 110 of the volumes published in Bloomsbury's Ancient Commentators on Aristotle series McKirahan has combined each word entry and analysed how many times particular translations occur He presents his findings numerically so that each meaning in turn has a note as to the number of times it is used For meanings that are found between one and four times the volume details are also given so that readers may quickly and easily look up the texts themselves The Divided Home/land Sue-Ellen Case, 1992 Anthology of plays by leading German women
