Driver Behaviour and Training: Volume 2 Dr. Lisa Dorn, 2017-07-05 Research on driver behaviour over the past two decades has clearly demonstrated that the goals and motivations a driver brings to the driving task are important determinants for driver behaviour. The importance of this work is underlined by statistics WHO figures show that road accidents are predicted to be the number three cause of death and injury by 2020 currently more than 20 million deaths and injuries p a. The objective of this second edition and of the conference on which it is based is to describe and discuss recent advances in the study of driving behaviour and driver training. It bridges the gap between practitioners in road safety and theoreticians investigating driving behaviour from a number of different perspectives and related disciplines. A major focus is to consider how driver training needs to be adapted to take into account driver characteristics goals and motivations in order to raise awareness of how these may contribute to unsafe driving behaviour and to go on to promote the development of driver training courses that consider all the skills that are essential for road safety. As well as setting out new approaches to driver training methodology based on many years of empirical research on driver behaviour the contributing road safety researchers and professionals consider the impact of human factors in the design of driver training as well as the traditional skills based approach. Readership includes road safety researchers from a variety of different academic backgrounds senior practitioners in the field of driver training from regulatory authorities and professional driver training organizations such as the police service and private and public sector personnel who are concerned with improving road safety.

Predictive Imagable Biomarkers for Brain Disorders Pravat K. Mandal, Lars Ersland, 2019-09-19 Recent research on Neurodegenerative disorders such as Alzheimer's Disease, Parkinson's Disease etc and Neuropsychiatric disorders such as Schizophrenia has shown strong evidence that altered brain tissue structure, physiology and connectivity reflect the extent of severity of behavioral and physical abnormalities. With the advancement of high field strength MR technologies like MRS (Magnetic Resonance Spectroscopy), fMRI (functional Magnetic Resonance Imaging) and DTI (Diffusion Tensor Imaging) it has become possible to non-invasively measure these changes in the brain microenvironment in terms of levels of antioxidants, neurotransmitters, regional activity, susceptibility and connectivity during transition from healthy to pathological conditions and during progression of disease stages. Advanced Machine Learning (ML) and Statistical modeling algorithms are utilizing features extracted from multimodal MR based neuropsychological and neurophysiological data to build classifiers that identify highly sensitive and specific biomarkers to aid in understanding the causal processes of these brain disorders and can be translated from bench to bedside clinical practices for non-invasive diagnostic testing It is also important to have global clinical research data sharing platforms that utilize data mining and ML to identify early biomarkers and test the sensitivity of old ones from time to time with advancement in research This Research Topic updates the reader about the latest research in imaginable biomarkers using MR methodologies and use of AI for testing the sensitivity of these biomarkers Novice drivers Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Transport Committee,2007-07-19 Novice Drivers Seventh report of session 2006 07 Vol 2 Oral and written Evidence Effectiveness of Commercial Motor Vehicle Driver Training Curricula and Delivery Methods John F.
