Global Environmental History Ian G Simmons, 2008-03-05 Courses which deal with environmental history have long lacked a comprehensive overview I G Simmons has made a significant contribution with a book that looks at the long term history of environment and humanity from 10 000 BC to AD 2000 This far reaching text considers the global picture and recognises the contributions of many disciplines including the natural sciences the social sciences and increasingly the humanities As a starting point this book takes the major phases of human technological evolution of the last 12 000 years and considers how these have affected the natural world It then considers the response to conditions such as climate change putting today's preoccupations into a long term perspective This is a book of history not prophecy and so makes no judgements on current anxieties

Agriculture in the Middle Ages Del Sweeney, 2016-11-11 Explores the cultural framework within which changes in agricultural technology and economic organization occur and the ways in which changes in the social fabric influence attitudes toward rural work and the peasantry Land Use Changes in Europe F.M.

Brouwer, A.J. Thomas, M.J. Chadwick, 2012-12-06 The patterns of land use that have evolved in Europe reflect the boundaries set by the natural environment and socio economic responses to the needs of the population Over the centuries man has been able to overcome increasingly the constraints placed on land use by the natural environment through the development of new technologies and innovations driven by an increasing population and rising material expectations However activities are still ultimately constrained by natural limitations such as climatic characteristics and associated edaphic and vegetational features A major problem for land management in its broadest sense can be a reluctance to foresee the consequent ecological changes This means that mitigating strategies will not be implemented in time to prevent environmental degradation and social hardship although in many parts of Europe over some centuries demands have been met in a sustainable way by sound prudent and temperate expectations that have dictated management regimes The management of land in Europe has always been a complex challenge land is the primary though finite resource DeciSions regarding the use of land and manipulation of ecosystem dynamics today may affect the long term primary productivity of the resource Reconstruction and Measurement of Landscape Change Jonathan Hunn,1994 The initial aim of the research from which this book arose was to place the Romano British villa at Gorhambury near St Albans Hertfordshire within the context of the resources which it might have exploited and the economic organisation for which it was a focus What resulted was a much wider history and reconstruction of the Gorhambury landscape itself This Study of six parishes in the St Albans area presents an analysis and measurement of the changing landscape from the pre medieval and medieval periods to the early modern examining such themes as settlement field systems land use and administration Land Transformation in Agriculture M.
