The North Mexican Frontier:

The North Mexican Frontier Basil Calvin Hedrick, J. Charles Kelley, Carroll L. Riley, 1971 This collection of thirteen research papers from difficult to obtain and out of print journals and books brings together classics of the earliest systematical archaeology done in the area north and west of Mexico The earliest paper included is a 1645 description of the great ruin of La Quemada or Tuitlan the latest is from 1959 but most of the papers are from the first part of this century All the Spanish papers have been translated and the texts have been edited and completely reset in modern format An Historical Geography of the North Mexican Frontier Frank Joseph Pucci, 1993 The Mexican Frontier, 1821-1846 David J. Weber, 1982-06 Reinterprets borderlands history from the Mexican perspective Frontier Naturalist Russell M. Lawson, 2012-11 This is a true story of discovery and discoverers in what was the northern frontier region of Mexico in the years before the Mexican War In 1826 when the story begins the region was claimed by both Mexico and the United States Neither country knew much about the lands crossed by such rivers as the Guadalupe Brazos Nueces Trinity and Rio Grande Jean Louis Berlandier a French naturalist was part of a team sent out by the Mexican Boundary Commission to explore the area His role was to collect specimens of flora and fauna and to record detailed observations of the landscapes and peoples through which the exploring party traveled His observations including sketches and paintings of plants landmarks and American Indians were the first compendium of scientific observations of the region to be collected and eventually published Here historian Russell Lawson tells the story of this multinational expedition using Berlandier's copious records as a way of conveying his view of the natural environment Lawson's narrative allows us to peer over Berlandier's shoulder as he traveled and recorded his experiences Berlandier and Lawson show us an America that no longer exists Frontiers of Evangelization Robert H. Jackson, 2017-07-21 The Spanish crown wanted native peoples in its American territories to be evangelized and to that end facilitated the establishment of missions by various Catholic orders Focusing on the Franciscan missions of the Sierra Gorda in Northern New Spain Mexico and the Jesuit missions of Chiquitos in what is now Bolivia Frontiers of Evangelization takes a comparative approach to understanding the experiences of indigenous populations in missions on the frontiers of Spanish America Marshaling a wealth of data from sacramental military and census records Robert H Jackson explores the many factors that influenced the stability of mission settlements including the indigenous communities previous subsistence patterns and family structures the evangelical techniques of the missionary orders the social and political organization within the mission communities and epidemiology in relation to population density and mobility The two orders Jackson's research shows organized and administered their missions very differently The Franciscans took a heavy handed approach and implemented disruptive social policies while the Jesuits engaged in a comparatively kinder and gentler form of colonization Yet the most critical factor to the missions success Jackson finds was the indigenous peoples existing demographic profile in particular their mobility Nonsedentary populations like the Pames and

Jonaces of the Sierra Gorda were more prone to demographic collapse once brought into the mission system whereas sedentary groups like the Guaran of Chiquitos experienced robust growth and greater resistance to disease and natural disaster Drawing on more than three decades of scholarly work this analysis of crucial archival material augments our understanding of the role of missions in colonization and the fate of indigenous peoples in Spanish America
