

NUMEROLOGY

In the most rudimentary sense, numbers are universal symbols that not only indicate quantities, but also reveal QUALITIES of words and names they correspond with.

Numbers are neither 'good' nor 'bad' but simply filters in which energy (consciousness) is channeled through and reciprocated between the observer and the observed.

With this principle of reciprocation, Numerology is based NOT on causality, but correspondence. Specific numbers in one's chart do not, nor cannot 'cause' anything, nor can they guarantee outcomes, but rather, correspond with a specific quality that can be applied and expressed in countless forms. Numerology should never be used to impose restrictions or limitations, but to present possibilities and options that may have otherwise been obscured behind obligations, expectations or superficial qualities.

The premise of numerology is based on the concept that prior to incarnation, one chooses their date of arrival (birth date) and designs the name acknowledged upon arrival. In the most simplistic terminology, The date of birth indicates what lesson one is here to learn, what life has to offer, and the name indicates where ones talents/abilities lie, and what they have to offer life.

Numerology understands life as a classroom in which the initiate aims towards graduation as opposed to a courtroom in which the adherent avoids condemnation.

Numerology is not justification for speculation but an invitation to exploration, introspection and ultimately, Self-Realization.

Numerology serves as a means to awaken attributes and aspirations that would otherwise remain dormant or difficult to identify and specify.

Numerology adds range and depth to understanding one's nature, which allows for the development and application of discernment and wisdom to exercise freewill.

Numerology provides a focal point from which to approach life but cannot determine outcomes nor can it indicate causes.

The relationship between numerology and astrology should both compliment and compensate each other. These separate approaches should never create conflict nor cause confusion, but offer revelations and clarity.

The cosmos expresses itself through the individual (astrology) while the individual expresses themselves through their numbers (numerology)
