Visions of Belonging Judith E. Smith,2004-09-01 Visions of Belonging explores how beloved and still remembered family stories A Tree Grows in Brooklyn I Remember Mama Gentleman s Agreement Death of a Salesman Marty and A Raisin in the Sun entered the popular imagination and shaped collective dreams in the postwar years and into the 1950s These stories helped define widely shared conceptions of who counted as representative Americans and who could be recognized as belonging The book listens in as white and black authors and directors readers and viewers reveal divergent emotionally textured and politically charged social visions Their diverse perspectives provide a point of entry into an extraordinary time when the possibilities for social transformation seemed boundless But changes were also fiercely contested especially as the war s culture of unity receded in the resurgence of cold war anticomunism and demands for racial equality were met with intensifying white resistance Judith E Smith traces the cultural trajectory of these family stories as they circulated widely in bestselling paperbacks hit movies and popular drama on stage radio and television Visions of Belonging provides unusually close access to a vibrant conversation among white and black Americans about the boundaries between public life and family matters and the meanings of race and ethnicity Would the new appearance of white working class ethnic characters expand Americans understanding of democracy Would these stories challenge the color line How could these stories simultaneously show that black families belonged to the larger family of the nation while also representing the forms of danger and discriminations that excluded them from full citizenship In the 1940s war driven challenges to racial and ethnic borderlines encouraged hesitant trespass against older notions of normal But by the end of the 1950s the cold war cultural atmosphere discouraged probing of racial and social inequality and ultimately turned family stories into a comforting retreat from politics The book crosses disciplinary boundaries suggesting a novel method for cultural history by probing the social history of literary dramatic and cinematic texts Smith's innovative use of archival research sets authorial intent next to audience reception to show how both contribute to shaping the contested meanings of American belonging

The Live Television Generation of Hollywood Film Directors

Gorham Anders Kindem, 1994 Television directors Arthur Penn, Delbert Mann, Jeffrey Hayden, George Roy Hill, Paul Bogart, Paul Nickell and Ted Post began their careers in New York during the heyday of the live drama shows. It was there that they learned their craft and honed their skills. With the end of the live era in the late 1950s these directors found themselves working on film. They brought many of the techniques of the live age to their new medium, altering the traditional production methods of Hollywood. Here these seven directors discuss their approaches to working with cast and production personnel, the social and aesthetic issues they first raised in the live television dramas and continued in their film work, and their interaction with critics and viewers

When Television was Young Paul Rutherford, 1990 National Union Catalog,

Includes entries for maps and atlases Fifties Television William Boddy, 1990 Just a few years in the mid 1950s separated the golden age of television's live anthology drama from Newton Minow's famous vast wasteland pronouncement. Fifties Television shows how the significant programming changes of the period cannot be attributed simply to shifting public tastes or the exhaustion of particular program genres but underscore fundamental changes in the way prime time entertainment programs were produced, sponsored and scheduled. These changes helped shape television as we know it today. William Boddy provides a wide ranging and rigorous analysis of the fledgling American television industry during the period of its greatest economic growth, programming changes and critical controversy. He carefully traces the development of the medium from the experimental era of the 1920s and 1930s through the regulatory battles of the 1940s and the network programming wars of the 1950s
