The Famine whose story is almost unknown due to wartime censorship by the British occurred because of a hyperinflation in the price of rice caused by the provisioning for the major offensive against the Japanese on India's eastern borders. Relief efforts were halfhearted because much of the countryside was in a state of endemic revolt against the British. The logistical problems caused by massive gifts of food by the British and Indian troops to the starving people threatened to stall the forthcoming offensive. The cause of the Famine was the deadly alienation between the Bengalis and their British rulers.

Forest of Tigers Annu Jalais, 2014-06-03 Acclaimed for its unique ecosystem and Royal Bengal tigers, the mangrove islands that comprise the Sundarbans area of the Bengal delta are the setting for this pioneering anthropological work. The key question that the author explores is what do tigers mean for the islanders of the Sundarbans. The diverse origins and current occupations of the local population produce different answers to this question, but for all the tiger question is a significant social marker. Far more than through caste, tribe, or religion, the Sundarbans islanders articulate their social locations and interactions by reference to the non-human world: the forest and its terrifying protagonist, the man-eating tiger. The book combines rich ethnography on a little-known region with contemporary theoretical insights to provide a new frame of reference to understand social relations in the Indian subcontinent. It will be of interest to scholars and students of anthropology, sociology, development studies, religion, and cultural studies, as well as those working on environment conservation, the state, and issues relating to discrimination and marginality
