The Best Of Chinese Cooking Pin Wei Zhi:

Food and War in Mid-Twentieth-Century East Asia Katarzyna J. Cwiertka, 2016-04-15 War has been both an agent of destruction and a catalyst for innovation. These two at first sight contradictory yet mutually constitutive outcomes of war waging are particularly pronounced in twentieth century Asia. While 1945 marked the beginning of peaceful recovery for Europe, military conflicts continued to play a critical role in the historical development of this part of the world. In essence, all wars in twentieth century Asia stemmed from the political vacuum that developed after the fall of the Japanese Wartime Empire, intricately connecting one region with another. Yet they have had often very diverse consequences, shattering the homes of some and bringing about affluence to others. Disarray of war may halt economic activities and render many aspects of life insignificant. The need for food, however, cannot be ignored, and the social action that it requires continues in all circumstances. This book documents the effects of war on the lives of ordinary people through the investigation of a variety of connections that developed between war waging and the production, distribution, preparation, and consumption of food throughout Asia since the 1930s. The topics addressed range from issues at stake at the time of the conflicts, such as provisioning the troops and food rationing and food relief for civilians, to long-term, often surprising consequences of war waging and wartime mobilization of resources on the food systems, diets, and tastes of the societies involved. The main argument of this volume is that war has not been a mere disruption but rather a central force in the social and cultural trajectories of twentieth century Asia. Due to its close connection with human nourishment and comfort, food stands central in the life of the individual. On the other hand, owing to its connection with profit and power, food plays a critical role in the social and economic organization of a society. What happens to food and eating is therefore an important index of change, a privileged basis for the exploration of historical processes.

Post-Beijing 2008: Geopolitics, Sport and the Pacific Rim

J. A. Mangan, Fan Hong, 2013-10-18 In 2008, as few in the world are unaware, China was host to the world via the Beijing Olympics. The world watched the metamorphosis of Beijing from insecure capital to confident metropolis, but aware of it or not, the world was also watching the symbolic assertion via the Games of a rising superpower. The Pacific Rim will be the stage on which China initially displays its new hegemonic intentions, aspirations, and ambitions. Thus, in Post-Beijing 2008, the political, economic, and cultural impact of Beijing 2008 on the geopolitical future of the Pacific Rim will be discussed. This perspective, analysed by some of the most distinguished academic commentators from some of the world's leading universities who are closely associated with the Pacific Rim, East and West, is original in focus, and the analysis is pregnant with political possibilities. This book was previously published as a special issue of the International Journal of the History of Sport.
