

Rhetorical questions in German political speech

Vincenzo Damiazzì (Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Milano)

Rhetorical questions play an important role in structuring political speech. Especially in plenary sessions - which see the members of parliament speaking to an audience who rarely interacts - rhetorical questions seem to be a very productive mean to convey information and keep the audience interested and involved. But how can we recognise a rhetorical question in a communicative context where no answers are ever expected? And how can we then tell them apart from regular, information-seeking questions? In order to classify questions in German political speech we can use a taxonomy which takes into account different parameters such as context, question-answer relations and vocabulary. Following this categorisation, the second part of the project is concerned with a prosodic analysis of these questions. Through the observation of F0 and therefore intonation contours questions will be analysed and compared to check for similarities and differences. The hypothesis is that, at least to some extent, rhetorical questions should have peculiar contours which differentiate them from information-seeking questions and that a particular type of rhetorical question (the topic-setting question) should present contours closer to those of assertions.

Gehrke, 2009-10-20 In The Ethics and Politics of Speech Pat J. Gehrke provides an accessible yet intensive history of the speech communication discipline during the twentieth century Drawing on several previously unpublished or unexamined sources including essays conference proceedings and archival documents Gehrke traces the evolution of communication studies and the dilemmas that often have faced academics in this field In his examination Gehrke not only provides fresh perspectives on old models of thinking he reveals new methods for approaching future studies of ethical and political communication Gehrke begins his history with the first half of the twentieth century discussing the development of a social psychology of speech and an ethics based on scientific principles and showing the importance of democracy to teaching and scholarship at this time He then investigates the shift toward philosophical especially existential ways of thinking about communication and ethics starting in the 1950s and continuing through the mid 1970s a period associated with the rise of rhetoric in the discipline In the chapters covering the last decades of the twentieth century Gehrke demonstrates how the ethics and politics of communication were directed back onto the practices of scholarship within the discipline examining the increased use of postmodern and poststructuralist theories as well as the new trend toward writing original theory rather than reinterpreting the past In offering a thorough history of rhetoric studies Gehrke sets the stage for new questions and arguments ultimately emphasizing the deeply moral and political implications that by nature embed themselves in the field of communication More than simply a history of the discipline s major developments The Ethics and Politics of Speech is an account of the philosophical and moral struggles that have faced communication scholars throughout the last century As Gehrke explores the themes and movements within rhetoric and speech studies of the past he also provides a better understanding of the powerful forces behind the forging of the field In doing so he reveals history s potential to act as a vehicle for further academic innovation in the future Briefs for debate on current political, economic, and social topics, ed. by W.
