Numbers, David N. Livingstone, 2020-04-09 This volume in the highly respected Cambridge History of Science series is devoted to exploring the history of modern science using national transnational and global frames of reference. Organized by topic and culture its essays by distinguished scholars offer the most comprehensive and up to date nondisciplinary history of modern science currently available. Essays are grouped together in separate sections that represent larger regions Europe Africa the Middle East South Asia East and Southeast Asia the United States Canada Australia New Zealand Oceania and Latin America. Each of these regional groupings ends with a separate essay reflecting on the analysis in the preceding chapters. Intended to provide a balanced and inclusive treatment of the modern world contributors analyze the history of science not only in local national and regional contexts but also with respect to the circulation of knowledge tools methods people and artifacts across national borders

The Social Sciences Go to Washington Hamilton Cravens, 2004 What happens when the allegedly value free social sciences enter the national political arena. In The Social Sciences Go to Washington scholars examine the effects of the massive influx of sociologists demographers economists educators and others to the federal advisory process in the postwar period. Essays look at how these social scientists sought to change existing policies in welfare public health urban policy national defense environmental policy and science and technology policy and the ways they tried to influence future policies. Policymakers have been troubled that followers of postmodernism have questioned the legitimacy of scientific and political authority to speak for the desires of social groups. As the social sciences increasingly become expressions of individual preferences the contributors ask how can they continue to be used to set public policy for us all. This collection is a useful resource for anyone studying the relationship between science and the government in the postwar years Race and Science Paul Lawrence Farber, Hamilton Cravens, 2009 During the course of American history scientific theories have been used to legitimate racial ideas that in turn have been important in creating and interpreting the law. Race and Science collects essays from leading voices in law history history of science botany and the social sciences resulting in a rich and comprehensive multidisciplinary exploration of the roots of and the scientific challenges to racial essentialism The notion that someone's racial identity and characteristics define everything of importance about them has become deeply embedded in American culture society and science These essays illuminate the roots of this belief and present case studies that explore how and why natural and social scientists have challenged these racist views Race and Science will be of interest to historians social scientists educators and scientists and others interested in racism as a phenomenon in American culture
