Social Working Gerald A.J. de Montigny, 1995-12-15 In this unique work directed at social workers Gerald A J de Montigny maintains that they along with other professionals create an institutional reality through their day to day practices He traces the practical ways that social workers when involved in child protection struggle to produce a world which can be ordered systematized and subjected to their powers It is a penetrating and sensitive analysis of how social workers in their everyday practice make sense from a confusing collection of case details to create organizationally defined problems and cases De Montigny uses the tension between his experience of growing up working class and the difficult process of becoming a social worker to explore the practical activities professionals use to secure organizational power and authority over clients This tension has forced him to confront the dilemma of how to stand on the side of clients when standing inside professional and organizational realities In the first half of the book de Montigny focuses on the practices social workers use to produce a universalized professional form of knowledge He examines social workers use of ideological practices fetishization of the social work profession insertion of details from clients lives into discursive order accounting for front line practice as a problem solving scientific practice and naming of their own frustrations conflicts tensions and pain as professionally manageable phenomena In the second half of the book based on his own work in child protection he systematically examines how such reality producing practices come to be expressed as child protection He develops a synthetic account of his social work interventions on cases of child abuse and neglect This book should be read by all practitioners and students of social work It is an original and practical application of theoretical arguments to the everyday reality of social work

Canadian Social Work Review ,2004

Community Work Approaches to Child Welfare Brian Wharf, 2002-02 Community Work Approaches to Child Welfare presents a number of case studies that illustrate alternative approaches to child welfare that recognizes the strengths and tenacity of families who live in resource poor and essentially unfriendly environments and that would drive middle class professionals to distraction The strengths of these families can be harnessed to improve their situation and that of others

Community work approaches are provided by accessible organizations that involve families in the design and implementation of programs that affect them and that are dedicated to developing the capacity of communities to care for children and families. The case studies range from urban child welfare agencies in Toronto and Winnipeg to the rural setting of Hazelton B C and to examples of First Nation communities that have taken control of child welfare. The studies are written by Canadian scholars who are widely recognized for their innovative research and writing in community work and child welfare.

Community Work Approaches to Child Welfare is also an indictment of the policies and practices that now govern the provision of child welfare services in Canada. The indictment argues that the policies that hold parents and particularly single parent women responsible for the care of their children without regard for the circumstances in which these families live is neither realistic nor helpful. It further holds that individualized and office based practice dominated by a paradigm of risk turns clients into objects thereby robbing them of their dignity and strengths. Community approaches make a viable alternative.

Transforming the Field Narda Razack, 2002. This primer to antiracist and antioppressive social work practices explores the ways in which power and dominance are embedded in every facet of fieldwork. A framework is provided for responding to social issues in the field and finding ways to break down barriers. Contemporary Social Work Practice Marty Dewees, 2006. CD ROM contains case studies.
