

PRIVATE PRACTICE NUTRITION COUNSELING GUIDE

Opening up:

- Tell me what brings you in today
- Tell me your last meal
- Where did you eat?
- Where do you want to start?

Goal setting:

- On a scale from 1-10, how confident are you that you can reach this goal?
 - If less than 5, make the goal easier
- How long has this goal been existing for you?
- If less than 6 months, make the goal more realistic
- What would make this more realistic about making these changes?
- What are some realistic steps you can take to achieve this goal?
- How can I help you succeed?

Addressing barriers to change:

- What barriers do you anticipate getting in the way of you reaching this goal?
- Tell me what you can do to remove these barriers?

Importance of change:

- What are the most important things to you?
- If you don't make any changes, will you still be able to do the most important things?
- What are some of your values? Are these values in line with other things?
- Does this behavior consistently support you from doing what you want to do?
- If you don't make any changes, where do you see yourself in 5 years from now?
- What are some of the reasons for keeping change and the ones that don't? On the other hand, what are some reasons for making a change?

Looking to the past / Considering new perspectives:

- What were things like before you started (i.e., the eating disorder, diabetes, weight gain)?
- What were the pros and cons parts back then?
- If you could go back in time, what would you do differently?
- If you had a time machine, what would you do differently?

The DBN HNT Nutrition Counseling Session Process

1. Client review:

- Use this time (initial) to review your client's individual Assessment Form.
- Consider how you can best assist your client's individual form in this step:
 - First, since this paperwork is comprehensive in nature, this may allow you to quickly implement necessary changes without you first having to go through lengthy discussions about specific recommendations. This is particularly helpful with more acute PCOS-like phenomena.
 - Second, you can quickly identify areas of input (i.e., focus on areas of concern) that you need to make changes for.
 - Third, you can quickly review the patient's self-report (i.e., focus on areas of concern) for the session. If there is not any self-report information, you might begin relevant conversations about the relevant focus areas.

2. Prepare relevant educational material and hand out any information that you are not familiar with:

- For patients, you might need to review information on various reproductive topics (i.e., ovulation, menstruation, etc.) as well as PCOS topics.

3. Client nutrition counseling session with others:

- Client sessions are usually 1-1.5 hours (if you have a 15 minute break, this may affect availability and can be 1.5 hours of actual nutrition counseling).
- If you are not available for 1.5 hours, then you can break the time down into two shorter sessions:
 - The first part should be focused more on education, where the first 30 minutes are educational. Present your counseling information (15-30 minutes).

- Present typical meal choices for what their goals of health are to understand where the client is coming from, unless they are here. This will also help to be consistent throughout sessions as you can always bring up the same eating style as well as meal and snack modifications (i.e., energy density, meal timing, protein intake, healthy fats, whole foods, healthy carbohydrates, etc.).
- Second, the second part focuses on planning and goal setting (30-45 minutes).
