The New Competition:

Building New Competition Law Regimes David Lewis, 2013 Nearly every important country now has a competition law. It is vital to understand the institutions that drive the operation of these laws. This excellent volume provides case studies of some of the more substantial new competition authorities written by former or current top agency officials and academics closely connected with those institutions. The book highlights the fact that whilst these institutions have certain features in common they are very much shaped by the history and circumstances of their own countries and cultures and that any serious prescription for them needs to balance those factors against the general economic doctrines that lie behind competition law around the world. Without that understanding regulators and those dealing with them are likely to face failure. The book points to ways of resolving those problems Allan Fels The Australia and New Zealand School of Government ANZSOG. This detailed book focuses on the development of competition law institutions and contains case studies that examine this against the backdrop of the debate around global convergence of competition law and the limits imposed by particular national circumstances. Five of the chapters examine the development of competition law regimes in a diverse range of countries Mexico, Hungary, South Africa, Thailand with comparative remarks on South Korea and Zambia. The remaining chapters examine the role of multinational institutions particularly the International Competition Network and the practice of and potential for regional competition law arrangements. The majority of the authors are seasoned practitioners of competition law all of whom acknowledge the importance of convergence while simultaneously demonstrating the limits imposed by divergent national circumstances. This carefully edited collection is a companion volume to Enforcing Competition Rules in South Africa an account of the development of competition law institutions in South Africa authored by David Lewis and published by Edward Elgar. Building New Competition Law Regimes will be of particular benefit to scholars, teachers and practitioners of competition law. It will also be of interest to development studies scholars, teachers and practitioners and to specialists in the countries that are the subjects of the case studies.

The New Competition Tool, 2020 The Commission is considering legislation which would introduce a New Competition Tool (NCT). Its general goal would be to undergird the protection of undistorted competition in the internal market with a new pillar. The NCT shall allow the Commission to tackle competition problems that are not covered or cannot be addressed effectively under the current EU competition rules. The NCT shall differ from and complement the existing competition rules in various respects:

1. It shall not focus on a wrongdoing of individual undertakings but on identifying specific features of the market that impede or hamper competition It will therefore not be of a quasicriminal nature and its application will not involve fines 2 in certain settings where special market characteristics and the conduct of the companies operating in the markets concerned create a threat for competition it shall allow for a precautionary intervention that would not be feasible under existing competition rules 3 it shall allow for a particularly timely intervention and 4 it shall enable the Commission to address the root cause of the identified competition problem This study is meant to explore the institutional set up of the NCT IV its procedural design V the scope of remedial powers and the criteria for choosing remedies VI the need for a commitment procedure VII the need for interim measures VIII sanctions in case of non compliance with remedial obligations or commitments IX and judicial review X The correct legal basis for the NCT is not part of this study
