Excerpt from The Potato A Compilation of Information From Every Available Source It is with the hope that a compilation of information in regard to one of the world's greatest food plants the potato will be of service to the increasing thousands of people now interested and becoming interested in practical scientific agriculture that this work is published. Never before in the history of the world has the production of human food received as great attention as at the present time. Population is increasing with alarming rapidity while the supply of land on which it is possible to grow food is limited. The one solution of the problem is the production of more and better food on every acre of land on which crops are grown. The working out of this problem calls for broad liberal education not the least factor of which is to benefit by the experience of others. This has been made a keynote in this work and while growers may not see fit to adopt wholly some of the methods described it is believed that they will find the suggestions helpful. The senior author has grown a large acreage of potatoes at Mt Sopris Farm for years and has made a careful study of the practical side of potato growing all over the world. The discussion of problems and the suggestions made are from the standpoint of the practical grower. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Not illustrated. 1912 edition. Excerpt CHAPTER XXXVI THE ISLAND OF CHILOE CHILE IN THE history of the potato there are occasional references to Chiloe. The senior author and Luther Burbank are planning to go there soon to study conditions. The following information has been secured through the kindness of Secretary James Wilson of the United States Department of Agriculture and Alfred A Winslow American Consul Valparaiso Chile. It is generally understood here that the Island of Chiloe Chile is the home of the potato and that it was found there by Pedro Valdivia's expedition in the first half of the fifteenth century where they were known by the natives as Poni. At that time potatoes served as the principal food of the Indians who cultivated them to some extent and where they are still cultivated in a very crude way The Chiloe Archipelago is situated off the west coast of Chile between 42 and 46 degrees south latitude and is composed of many islands of which the largest Chiloe is about 100 miles long by 38 miles wide and covers about 2 450 square miles with a population of about 40 500 persons mostly Indians or half breeds The farms vary from 50 to 500 or 600 acres but the island is covered with a dense forest save where small patches have been cleared for cultivation scarcely ever exceeding fifty acres in area and the potato patches rarely exceed six to eight acres According to the best information I have been able to get no machinery is used in the cultivation of potatoes further than a very crude plow and a spade or hoe They are planted in rows at irregular distances varying from eighteen inches to three feet apart On the larger farms the seed is generally planted by dropping whole potatoes into the furrow at distances of from eighteen Dictionary
