The Disturbed Child:

Hospital Inpatient Treatment Units for Emotionally Disturbed Children: United States, 1971-72 Michael J. Witkin, 1974 Hospital Inpatient Treatment Units for Emotionally Disturbed Children: United States, 1971-72; Mental Health Facility Reports Series A, Number 15 National Institute of Mental Health (U.S.), 1974 Systematic Intervention with Disturbed Children Marvin J. Fine, 2012-12-06 Disturbed children constitute a sizeable and varied percentage of the child population. Generally two to three percent have severe longstanding problems and 20 to 30 percent have current more transient problems. While preventive efforts are needed, it also seems obvious that many children will continue to function in a disturbed and disturbing fashion and will continue to require various kinds of therapeutic interventions. These interventions will mainly occur in school and community settings. This book attempts to present a picture of some fairly popular models of intervention and to consider important related issues. There are probably as many ways of coping with disturbed children as there are creative caring persons attempting to do the coping. A growing literature exists on ways of conceptualizing and intervening with such children. It was believed by the editor that an organized body of information on these concepts and techniques would prove useful to student and practitioner. A danger with such collections is that if they mainly portray novel or atypical techniques while informative the book quickly becomes passe and of limited value. This book's focus is on contemporary thought but also on orientations that have stood the test of some time and the stability of the underlying theory. The Disturbed Child Pearl H. Berkowitz, Esther P. Rothman, 1960 The Social Psychology of the Child with Epilepsy Christopher Bagley, 2015-06-19 When this title was first published in 1971 there were about 300 000 people with epilepsy in England and Wales. Nearly one third of them were children. This book is an integrated review of how epileptic children behaved and of how they were regarded by parents, teachers and peers at the time. Written by a sociologist with a training in psychology, human biology and education the book draws on several disciplines: sociology, psychology, biology, in seeking to understand the complex determinants of deviant behaviour in children with epilepsy. The author considers in detail the lives of 118 epileptic children, bringing together and analysing a wide range of measurements of behaviour, social relations and abnormalities of brain function. He discusses how the children fare in school and how epilepsy affects both the teacher's perception of the child and the child's scholastic performance. The dearth of medical centres which could diagnose and treat epilepsy at the time is examined and hospital use according to parents' social class is analysed. The author looks at the role of parents of epileptic children and shows that their attitude to epilepsy is of major importance for the child's adjustment. The prejudice to which epileptic children and adolescents were subjected by the world at large is chronicled in detail. Finally the author considers how his empirical material makes a contribution to the theoretical problem of integrating sociology, psychology and biology into a single discipline concerned with the explanation of human social behaviour.
