Shadowed Ground Kenneth E. Foote, 1997 From the battlefield at Gettysburg to the Oklahoma City block where the Alfred P Murrah Federal Building once stood sites of violence and tragedy have left indelible marks on the American landscape Some have become places of pilgrimage where visitors mourn losses learn lessons from the tragedy and experience renewal Others became empty places where nothing remains to commemorate or even to mark the occurrence In this pioneering book Kenneth E Foote explores how and why Americans have memorialized or not the sites of tragic and violent events Drawing on years of travel and reflection he traces the history of sites spanning three centuries and every region of the United States Foote deduces that Americans usually react to the scenes of tragedy in one of four ways Many places undergo public sanctification such as Memphis Lorraine Motel where Martin Luther King Jr was assassinated Some are simply designated with a marker while others are rectified and returned to normal use Those that produce shame and revulsion are often obliterated and left empty These differing reactions to sites of violence offer an important new perspective to the debate over violence in American society      To Kill Again Donald J. Sears,1991 This text attempts to explain the motivation behind serial killing and the steps society can take to prevent it The author discusses the psychological sociological and biological factors that may lead to this crime and examines the backgrounds of some notorious serial killers      Catching Serial Killers Earl Wallace Krueger James,1991      Serial Murder Elliott Leyton,Linda Chafe,2000 Psychiatry held centre court in relation to studies into serial murder up to the 1980s Since that time a more generalised and scholarly approach has been taken and this volume assesses current ways of researching and commenting upon serial murder
