The Delectable Mountains:

The Delectable Mountains Arthur Willis Colton, 2020-09-28 The hut was built two sides and the roof of sodded poles the roof had new clapboards of birch bark but the rest had once belonged to a charcoal burner the front side was partly poled and partly open the back was the under slope of a rock For it stood by a cliff one of the many that show their lonely faces all over the Cattle Ridge except that this was more tumultuous than most and full of caves made by the clumsy leaning bowlders and all about were slim young birch trees in white and green like the demoiselles at Camelot Old pines stood above the cliff making a soft sad noise in the wind In one of the caves above the leafage of the birches we kept the idols especially Baal whom we thought the most energetic and in front of the cave was the altar stone that served them all a great flat rock and thick with moss where ears of corn were sacrificed or peas or turnips the first fruits of the field or of course if you shot a chipmunk or a rabbit you could have a burnt offering of that kind Also the altar stone was a council chamber and an outlook It was all a secret place on the north side of the Cattle Ridge with cliffs above and cliffs below Eastward half a mile lay the Cattle Ridge Road and beyond that the Ridge ran on indefinitely southward three miles down the road took you into Hagar westward the Ridge after all its leagues of length and rigor of form broke down hurriedly to the Wyantenaug River at a place called the Haunted Water where stood the Leather Hermit's hut and beyond which were Bazilloa Armitage's bottom lands and the Preston Plains railroad station The road from the station across the bridge came through Sanderson Hollow where the fields were all over cattle and lively horses and met the Cattle Ridge Road to Hagar And last if you looked north from the altar stone you saw a long downward sweep of woodland and on and on miles and miles to the meadows and ploughed lands toward Wimberton with a glimpse of the Wyantenaug far away to the left Such were the surroundings of the place of abandoned gods No one but ourselves came there unless possibly the Hermit If any one had come it was thought that Baal would pitch him over the cliffs in some manner mystically We got down on our hands and knees and said O Baal He was painted green on a shingle but his eyes were red The place was reached from the Cattle Ridge Road by trail for the old wood road below was grown up to blackberry brambles which made one scratched and bloody and out of patience unless it were blackberry time

The Delectable Mountains (Classic Reprint) Arthur Willis Colton, 2018-01-17 Excerpt from The Delectable Mountains So they went up to the Mountains to behold the Gardens and Orchards the Vineyards and Fountains of water Now there was on the tops of these Mountains Shepherds feeding their flocks and they stood by the high way side The Pilgrims therefore went to them and leaning upon their staves as is common with weary Pilgrims when they stand to talk with any by the way they asked Whose delectable Mountains are these When the Shepherds perceived that they were wayfaring men they also put questions to them as Whence came you And How got you into the way And By what means have you so persevered therein Then said the Shepherds one to another Let us here shew to the Pilgrims the Gates of the Coelestial City if they have skill to look through our Per spective Glass Then they essayed to look but they could not look steadily through the Glass yet they thought they saw something like the Gate About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works The Delectable Mountains Leonard
