Social Interaction in Chinese Society Sidney L. Greenblatt, Richard W. Wilson, Amy Auerbacher Wilson, 1982      Social, Psychological, & Philosophical Foundations of Education, ... Annual Report University of Minnesota. College of Education, 1979      Social Interaction Michael Argyle, 2007 This is the first book length work to reflect the recent trend in social psychology away from artificial laboratory test results. It focuses directly on the detailed concrete elements of social behavior as they are observed in a real life setting. Michael Argyle's approach here differs from that more generally taken in two respects. First he discusses human interaction in terms of the basic elements of behavior: bodily and facial movements, gestures, eye movements, facial expression, proximity and orientation, the verbal and non-verbal aspects of communication. Second, he has drawn on research in such varied areas as psychiatry, anthropology, linguistics, ethology, developmental and organizational psychology, as well as on his own extensive experimental studies. Particular emphasis is given to the biological roots of interaction and to its cultural setting. Social Interaction demonstrates a strong awareness of the current theories of social psychology while restricting itself in exposition to the observable aspects of human interaction. The result is a comprehensive and stimulating introduction to social interaction. This is primarily a textbook for students of social psychology, but it covers a field that is of central importance for all students of the social and biological sciences. Michael Argyle (1925-2002) held the position of Reader in Social Psychology at Oxford University and was a Fellow of Wolfson College. He was the author of numerous books and papers in British and American journals; he helped found and was joint editor of the British Journal of Social and Clinical Psychology. He also played an important part in the establishment of the Social Psychology Section of the British Psychological Society and served as its Secretary and Chairman.      The Handbook of Social Psychology: Group psychology and phenomena of interaction Gardner Lindzey, Elliot Aronson, 1969      American Physical Education Review, 1929 Includes abstracts of magazine articles and Book reviews      Social Psychology & Modern Life Patricia Niles Middlebrook, Philip G. Zimbardo, 1980      Current British Journals, 1989      Subject Guide to Books in Print, 1993      The Development and Assessment of a Drink-driving Campaign Barry Elliott, 1985 Alcohol education programmes, Drinking attitudes, Public information programs, Advertising. In January 1979 the Office of Road Safety, Department of Transport Australia commissioned B J Elliott and Associates to develop approaches to drink driving publicity. In October of that year a detailed interim report by Elliott Peberdy specified the options available and recommended a communications strategy. These options were based upon original research conducted by one of the authors in Tasmania together with a thorough review of relevant existing literature and communication efforts from around the world. The strategy deviated from traditional approaches being at the associate of the drink driver and also in attempting a positive modelling approach rather than highlighting the negative consequences of the undesirable behaviour. The target audience chosen was the associates of drink drivers especially those over 30 years of age. Tasmania was chosen for the purpose of developing and assessing a pilot campaign involving television radio press outdoor advertising and public relations activities Evaluation of the pilot campaign involved a controlled field experiment utilising before and after surveys of self reported drinking and drink driving behaviour in an experimental and control city with a switch over experimental design Positive results were obtained but some effects were not very sizeable in magnitude The report concludes with a brief statement regarding the future use of the mass media as a result of the experience from the Cronin campaign

Papers ,1994      The Journal of Education ,1945      Officer Behavior in Police-citizen Encounters Karen L.

Amendola, 1996 The decision by a police officer to use lethal or less than lethal force in encounters with citizens is an issue of grave concern to police agencies officers and the community and virtually all police citizen encounters are dynamic situations influenced by a range of factors A descriptive model is proposed to explain major factors and specific variables that affect the need to use or likelihood of using force The model depicts a police officer's behavior as the culmination of various influences and actions of others Model components include antecedent events traits and behaviors of parties situational information and characteristics police officer characteristics available options constraints and facilitative factors and situational outcomes The model can be used as a framework to organize findings from existing literature and interpreting their meaning Given the increasingly litigious nature of police citizen encounters police officers must consider legalities and political ramifications of a selected action and make decisions accordingly Perhaps the most critical consideration for a police officer in determining which behavior to select is his or her perception of whether the behavior may be questioned and who will support it 16
